Senate Passes Full Relief Bill; Arts Cut to Third

Roosevelt Hurries Back to Save Rule of Dollar by Deal With Silver Bloc on 77.5¢

By Robert C. Albright

House money bill managers served notice last night they would insist adamantly on extension of the President's dollar devaluation powers following a House vote dispatching the currency stabilization measure to conference.

With devaluation and stabilization powers expiring tomorrow midnight, President Roosevelt hastened back to Washington from Hyde Park and House and Senate conferees called a meeting for noon today in an effort to effect a settlement.

Informal negotiations were in progress for a compromise, calling for continuation of the President's dollar powers in exchange for an increase in the Treasury's domestic silver purchase price to 77.57 cents an ounce, the level asked in the Senate bill.

Somers Against Change

But Chairman Somers of the House Coinage Committee, heading the House conferees, said he regarded the 209 to 161 House vote sending the bill to conference as virtual instruction to stand by the House bill which extends money powers but makes no concession to Congressional silverites.

"I am not in favor of fooling around," Somers told reporters. "I would rather let the whole thing (President's money powers and silver purchase authority) go by default. The stabilization authority is no good without the devaluation power."

In the event tomorrow night's deadline passes without an agreement, and the currency authority expires, Somers said Congress would be asked to consider re-enactment of the legislation.

Others Optimistic

Other House leaders were more optimistic. One, who declined to be quoted, confidently predicted "there will be a bill by Friday night, and devaluation authority will be in it."

Chairman Wagner of the House Banking Committee, at the head of the Senate conferees, would make no predictions, but obviously was dubious of an immediate agreement. Although authority to devalue the dollar, purchase and coin silver, and continue use of the $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund dies in 48 hours, Wagner said lapse of one or two days need not necessarily bring serious consequences.

Although Somers is understood to have informed Wagner that the House has nothing other to offer than the provisions of the Administration's bill, talk of a compromise persisted.

Apparently a strategy would be used similar to the Senate trade by which Eastern sound money Republicans and Western silver Democrats succeeded in eliminating dollar devaluation authority from the Senate bill, continuing the stabilization fund, stopping Treasury purchase of foreign silver, and hiking the Treasury domestic silver price to 77.57 cents an ounce.

Test in Senate

In an effort to split silverites away from this Senate agreement, the Administration would offer the increased domestic silver price in return for full money power retention. A majority of both House and Senate conference committees, it is believed, would go along with such Administration proposals, but the test would come when the project goes back, as it must, to the Senate for a vote. If the silver-devaluation repeal voting agreement holds fast, expiration of the money powers appeared inevitable.

If, on the other hand, Senate silverites, not fundamentally opposed to devaluation, trade next time with Administration forces, hopelessly outnumbered Eastern Republicans

Farm Security, NYA Allotments Raised; Furloughs Ordered For 18-Month Cases

By John B. Oakes.

In a session that had dragged on for more than 12 hours, a worn and weary Senate early today passed a $1,775,000,000 relief bill for the coming fiscal year.

Carrying a series of highly controversial changes, the measure goes to conference today, and must be approved by both Houses and sent to the President before midnight tomorrow, the end of the fiscal year.

The Senate raised House appropriations by $66,000,000, about $41,000,000 above buget estimates.

With the very existence of WPA threatened unless new legislation is adopted before Saturday, the House Appropriations Committee is prepared to throw into the breach a simple resolution merely granting the work relief agency sufficient funds to tide it over for another month.

FSA Fund Boosted

Racing against time with the speed of a snail, the Senate yesterday altered the House bill by:

Raising the Farm Security Administration's appropriations by $40,000,000 to $163,000,000.

Increasing the National Youth Administration funds by $23,000,000, to a total of $124,0000,000, slightly above the budget figures.

Boosting the Public Health Service Administration appropriation by $300,000, to $600,000.

Restoring the Federal theater projects.

Putting all arts projects back on a Federal basis.

Requiring that 25 per cent of the total cost of other WPA projects within each State be borne by local sponsors. However, projects approved prior to January 1, 1940, will not come under this restriction.)

Inserting the prevailing wage provisions of the current law.

Modifying the enforced retation of WPA workers.

Full Request Granted

A determined effort by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, to appropriate an additional unbudgeted $500,000,000 for PWA was defeated, 43-32, while a follow-up attempt by Senator Hayden (Democrat), of Arizona, to give the PWA $250,000,000 failed by but a single vote, 38 to 38.

As it now stands, the measure allots the full Presidential request of $1,477,000,000 to WPA and gives $163,000,000 to FSA, and approximately $124,000,000 to NYA. The increase in the FSA fund was approved, 49 to 26, despite the fact

D. C. Facing Empty Till in House Fight

Urgent Meeting of Conferees Called To End Deadlock Over Lump Sum

Senate and House conferees on the District supply and revenue measures, now within 48 hours of the end of the fiscal year, will hold urgent sessions this morning in an effort to avert a District financial crisis.

After receiving the third indorsement from the Senate, Senator Overton (Democrat), of Louisiana, called a conference on the tax bill at 9:30 a. m. and a parley on the revenue measure at 2:30 p. m.

Some hope of a compromise in the deadlock between the House and Senate over the Federal payment to the District was seen, meanwhile, when Chairman Randolph of the House District Committee said he would be willing to raise the lump-sum authorization in the tax bill to $6,000,000.

Compromise Disliked

The compromise proposal, however, pleased neither the House die-hards nor Senator Overton. Other conferees on the revenue bill indicated they would be guided by the House vote against any increase above $5,000,000, while Senator Overton said he would insist on adoption of his land-ratio formula.

Even though the $6,000,000 compromise is accepted by both Houses, there was some doubt on Capitol Hill as to whether it could be applied to the pending appropriations act. Board of Trade President Lawrence E. Williams praised the Randolph proposal last night.

Senator Overton obtained the third indorsement of his efforts from the Senate when he called up the conference report on the appropriations bill and asked that the Senate insist further on its amendment raising the lump sum to $7,750,000.

Battle Threatens

All of the conference agreements previously adopted by the House were accepted by the Senate. The entire report was threatened with rejection when Senators O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, and LaFollette (Progressive), of Wisconsin, criticized a $30 limitation on old-age and blind pensions.

After Senator O'Mahoney pleaded with Overton to send the item back to conference, he asked for a vote on a motion to reject the repost. The motion lost and the report was adopted. The lump sum appropriations for new schools and a $800,000 addition for relief remain in disagreement.

Temporary Funds Likely

Senator Overton said that a continuing resolution to provide the District government with operating expenses while negotiations continue on the supply bill will be considered at this afternoon's conference.

While conferees were somewhat uncertain as to the provisions of a continuing resolution, Maj. Daniel J. Donovan, District auditor and budget officer, advised the Commissioners it should specify the tax rates for the next fiscal year.

He called attention to the 1923 appropriations act, which requires the Commissioners to fix the realty and personal property tax rate at the beginning of every fiscal year sufficiently high to meet Congressional appropriations.

Should a deadlock occur on the revenue bill, a resolution continuing the business privilege tax temporarily also may be offered.

House conferees named yesterday on the tax bill, besides Chairman Randolph, are Representatives Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma; Kennedy (Democrat), of Maryland; Dirksen (Republican), of Illinois; Bates (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Senate conferees are Senators Overton, chairman; King (Democrat), of Utah; McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada; Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland; Capper (Republican), of Kansas.

Clipper's First Paid Fares Over Atlantic

With 22 Passengers, One From Capital; Mail Flight Ends

By the Associated Press

Port Washington, N. Y., June 28. The first paying passengers ever to be flown by airplane across the Atlantic stepped rather casually aboard the big gray Dixie Clipper today and a minute later were off for Europe—scheduled to arrive at Horta, the Azores, by breakfast time tomorrow.

While 5,000 spectators waved, and harbor craft saluted with whistles, the $750,000 flying boat of Pan American Airways taxied smoothly over Manhasset Bay—then upward and out, opening a new era in aviation.

With the ship's departure at 2:12 p. m. on a 4,650-mile flight, aviation's long-cherished dream of regular transatlantic passenger service by plane became a reality.

Eight hours and 18 minutes after the departure more than 1,100 miles, nearly half the distance to Horta, had been traversed.

Twenty-two passengers, one of whom, W. J. Eck, of Washington, applied for passage as long as eight years ago, and a crew of 11 were aboard the 41-ton flying boat that started the schedule of twice-weekly clipper flights to Europe.

Twenty-five minutes after the Dixie Clipper's departure, another flight ended on the other side of the Atlantic, when the Yankee Clipper, inaugurating regular mail service between the United States and England via Newfoundland, arrived at Southampton.

Band music and cannon salutes from four yacht clubs sounded as

O'Mahoney Introduces It; Monopoly Suspected In Union-Builder Tieup

Administration strategy stressing civil instead of criminal court actions in the fight against monopoly was revealed in a bill introduced yesterday by Senator O'Mahoney (Democrat), of Wyoming, monopoly committee chairman, providing for heavy fines for concerns found guilty of antitrust law violations.

Introduced after conferences between O'Mahoney and Thurman Arnold, Assistant Attorney General in charge of anti-trust prosecutions, the bill would make officers and directors of corporations as well as the corporations liable for violations.

Corporations could be sued for twice the amount of their total net income for every month in which an antitrust law violation occurred. Officers and directors could be sued for twice the amount of their compensation for every month in which a violation occurred, and, in addition, could be barred from further connection with the company.

O'Mahoney declared that "bringing antitrust law violations home to officers responsible for these practices will go a long way to cure many of the restraints of trade."

Meanwhile, Senator King (Democrat), Utah, charged that testimony before the monopoly committee relating to agreements between labor unions and suppliers of building materials revealed an apparent violation of the Sherman antitrust act.

He referred to statements by two Chicago real estate men that, as a result of such agreements, they were forced to use in home con-

Naval Academy Graduate Faces Charge of Fraud

New York, June 28 (AP).—A Federal grand jury today indicted George Ponville Freeman, graduate of the United States Naval Academy, on charges of impersonating officers for purposes of fraud and using the mails to defraud. He pleaded innocent and was remanded in default of $5,000 bail.

Freeman, a native of Huntington, Tenn., and a member of the Naval Academy's class of 1931, was cashiered from the service six years ago, Assistant United States Attorney Jerome Doyle said, for failing to meet debts allegedly incurred as an ensign.

His record, as outlined by Doyle, included imprisonment in San Francisco for cashing a check drawn on a bank in which he had no funds, arrest in Los Angeles for posing as a naval officer and borrowing money in several cities by representing himself as an officer.

Audit Ordered To Settle D. C. Compensation Row

The commissioners ordered yesterday an audit of the accounts of the District Unemployment Compensation Board in order to settle the controversy between District Auditor Daniel J. Donovan and John A. Marshall, compensation board director, regarding the number of mistakes made in payments last year.

They appointed D. P. Herman, special assistant District auditor and George Sklar, auditor for the DUC board, to restudy the audited accounts.

Maj. Donovan has contended that the board made errors in 12 per cent of the jobless payroll in one month. Marshall later submitted a report stating that out of 55,158 original claims filed with the board, 1,871 bona fide exceptions were filed by the District Auditor, and that 1,491 other cases were in the process of adjustment. Marshall charged that 740 other exceptions were errors made by Maj. Donovan's staff.

Ruth All Her Life, District Woman Finds It's Wrong

Mrs. Margaret Johnson Nicholson yesterday asked the District Court to rule that her given name is Ruth.

She declared she was Ruth when she married and signed her name Ruth on the birth certificate of her son. Furthermore, she never has heard herself called anything except Ruth and her parents left some property to her as Ruth.

That's why she was so surprised to learn only recently that the birth certificate filed for her in Binghamton, N. Y., in 1897, plainly states she is Margaret.

She doesn't know why it does, and she wants the court to rule that she's who she thinks she is—Mrs. Ruth Johnson Nicholson. She lives at the Roosevelt Hotel.

U. S. Workers Get Extra Day As Roosevelt's July 4 Gift

While Government workers yesterday hailed with joy a Presidential order relieving them of work from 1 p. m. Saturday to Wednesday morning to celebrate the Fourth of July, District police officials redoubled efforts to make the holiday quiet, safe and sane.

Scout cars continued their now daily routine of scattering impatient youngsters who were giving Independence Day a too explosive early welcome. Officials issued reminders of regulations banning sale, delivery or discharge of "fire crackers of any kind, torpedoes, roman candles, sky-rockets, bombs or any other fireworks."

Meanwhile, it was learned that several business houses in Washington may follow the President in declaring Monday an emergency holiday.

While fireworks merchants yesterday hampered enforcement of the regulation by setting up sidewalk stands just across the District line, Superintendent of Police Maj. Ernest W. Brown reminded citizens the regulations forbid discharge as well as sale of the explosives.

All available men will be on duty next Tuesday to enforce this order, Maj. Brown declared, in calling on all citizens to report violations. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen added his plea for a "really happy and safe Fourth."

The National Society for the Prevention of Blindness warned parents that blindness and painful eye in-

Hot Penny Tosser Burns 8 Children

FBI Probes All D. C. Law Enforcement

Police Court Inquiry Spreads; 70 Police Grilled; Auto Cases to Get Special Attention

By Howard F. Wentworth.

The District's system of criminal and traffic law prosecutions is the target of an intensive inquiry by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, it was learned last night.

Outgrowth of an investigation into Police Court conditions, the F. B. I. check has spread to every law enforcement branch in the city, it was further reported.

More than 70 members of the Metropolitan Police Department have been questioned at the Department of Justice. Thirty-five detectives, including a lieutenant, were grilled at length yesterday. More than a score of uniformed officers have already told what they know about certain traffic cases in which charges were dropped.

Although Attorney General Frank Murphy announced recently that results of the Police Court investigation would be made public "within a few days," it was indicated last night that the inquiry had reached such proportions that its conclusion was some time distant.

The inquiry is headed by Guy Hottel, FBI field supervisor for the Washington office.

Nolle Prosses Investigated

Particular emphasis, it was learned, is being placed on reasons behind a large number of nolle prosses in both criminal and traffic law violations. The Federal investigators are attempting to learn why numerous charges have been dropped before reaching court.

The inquiry covers not only Police Court, but District Court, the United States Attorney's office and the assistant corporation counsel's office, where certain cases, under investigation, it was learned, are four or more years old.

Principal testimony offered by Metropolitan policemen, it was reported, involved their parts in the dropping of certain cases without trial. The majority of these cases, according to sources close to the investigation, centered around prisoners charged with plural offenses. In numerous instances now under fire the offenders were convicted on one count while other counts were nolle prossed.

It is understood that in almost every case involving nolle prossed charges—traffic and criminal—the policemen summoned for questioning were asked if they knew the reason. It is expected that ranking court and prosecuting authorities will be called before the G-men.

Study Court Delays

Another phase of the inquiry is directed at delays in presenting cases to court after arrests are made. Long-pending criminal indictments and traffic prosecution papers are gathering dust on court shelves and the FBI men are seeking to learn why action in these cases was not taken.

Justice Department officials declined to comment on the probe, explaining only that "certain practices" are under scrutiny. Maj. Ernest W. Brown, police superintendent, insisted the inquiry was "a Department of Justice matter and I know nothing about it."

It is not the first time laxity and delay in court prosecutions here have been under fire. The Washington Criminal Justice Association conducted a similar inquiry several years ago.

Motor Trouble Downs Endurance Fliers

Springfield, Ill., June 28 (AP).—Hunter Moody and Wilbur Parrish, Decatur airmen who sought to establish a new world sustained flight record for light planes, landed their small monoplane at 6:23 a. m. (Eastern standard time) today, 58 hours 17 minutes short of the record of 218 hours. Motor trouble ended the flight after 159 hours 43 minutes.

Sentiment Appears in House For Outright Neutrality Repeal

Strong bi-partisan sentiment for repeal of all neutrality legislation and return to international law was uncovered in the House yesterday as members moved toward a vote today on the Administration's bill scrapping the arms embargo.

A vote on the sweeping neutrality repeal alternative apparently was assured as two influential Republicans joined with some Democratic foreign affairs committeemen in championing an end to statutory neutrality. Leaders meanwhile said they had counted at least enough noses to end the present war-time embargo on all implements of war.

Representative Barton and Representative Wadsworth, New York Republicans, declared they would welcome an amendment substituting neutrality repeal for the Administration bill. Representative Shanley, a ranking committee Democrat, drew applause from the Republican side when he asserted this Nation should return to the rules of international law. Only two features of the bill would be retained under this proposal—section 16 repealing prior neutrality legislation and provisions continuing the munitions-control board.

Representative Barton meanwhile suggested a "moderate arms embargo" as a possible compromise with the Administration proposal to end the present wartime ban on shipment of all arms, munitions and war implements. His "compromise," which he said would be offered to-

Nazi Showdown Over Danzig Reported Near

London Asks Hitler to Confer On Europe's Trade Problems

By William Hillman,
International News Service Correspondent.

London, June 28.—Beset with growing anxiety over possibility of an imminent Nazi coup in Danzig, Great Britain tonight sent a note to Reichsfuehrer Hitler proposing that the Nazi Reich and Britain launch conferences on Europe's critical economic problems.

The only condition, the British memorandum said, is establishment of "mutual confidence and good will."

The tone of the memorandum clearly displayed the aspect of worry taken by the British government in regard to the shaky peace of Europe.

There was speculation in some high British quarters that tonight's note may have been timed as a "last ditch" persuader against a possible German attempt to take the Free City immediately.

Britain's offer was a reply to Germany's recent note denouncing the Anglo-German naval treaty on the grounds that London has launched itself upon a policy of German "encirclement."

Britain Denies Charge

The note flatly denied the charge and reiterated Britain's willingness to negotiate in every possible manner for the betterment of Germany's world economic position.

On April 28, Hitler personally denounced the Anglo-German naval treaty in his speech before the Reichstag. Immediately thereafter the British government acknowledged his action and promised a full formal reply, which was contained in tonight's memorandum.

Rejecting Hitler's argument that Britain has placed itself in a position of unchangeable hostility to Germany in the event of a war in Europe, the British note said:

"It is not the case that in whatever part of Europe Germany might be involved in a warlike conflict Great Britain must always take up an attitude hostile to Germany.

Allegations Rejected

"Britain could be hostile to Germany only if Germany were to commit an act of aggression against another country, and the political decisions to which it is understood the German government refers in its memorandum involving guarantees by Britain to certain countries could only operate if the countries concerned were attacked by Germany.

The British government, the note added, rejects all allegations that she intends or desires to restrict development of German trade.

"On the contrary, under the Anglo-German payments agreement,

Japanese Raiding Planes Repelled, Soviets Claim

Moscow, June 28 (AP).—Fifteen Japanese-Manchukuo bombers, protected by fighting planes, invaded Outer Mongolia on new border raids today, a Tass communique said, and lost two planes shot down by Soviet-Mongol anti-aircraft guns.

The communique of the official Soviet news agency said the planes dropped several bombs near Lake Bor, and then retired to Manchukuo territory without engaging in battle.

(In Tokyo Japanese military circles expressed belief the destruction yesterday of a Soviet-Outer Mongolian army base near the Manchukuo frontier had ended "for the time being" the likelihood of further attacks.)

East Prussian Storm Troopers Flood Free City, Paris Informed

By John Elliott.
Special Cable to The Post.

Paris, June 28.—Serious disquietude exists in diplomatic circles here today over developments in Danzig, where, according to reports reaching Paris, the Nazis seem to be preparing for a showdown with the democracies.

These messages tell of numerous infiltrations from East Prussia of Nazi Storm Troopers, camouflaged as tourists, who in reality are said to be destined to fill the ranks of the Danzig Free Corps, recently organized by Henrich Himmler, chief of the Gestapo.

Premier Daladier was revealed to have disclosed to parliamentary leaders that the French military intelligence had confirmed reports of large Nazi movements of men into Danzig, and that a Nazi attempt to seize the Free City was imminent.

Bullitt Told of Moves

Foreign Minister Bonnet was said reliably to have told American Ambassador Bullitt and British Ambassador Phipps of German moves in Danzig, which foreign office circles predicted would come to a head in a short time.

A flood of reports from Warsaw told of the infiltration from East Prussia and said also that military drills were being held for the "new Danigers;" that food was being stored and that gas masks had been issued.

As seen here, the greatest menace lies in the fact that Reichsfuehrer Hitler, misinformed by Foreign Minister von Ribbentrop, is firmly convinced that when faced with the alternative of allowing Danzig to be incorporated in the Reich or going to war, England and France will back down as they did last year over Czecho-Slovakia.

Daladier Pessimistic

It was to dissipate these false impressions that Daladier addressed his solemn warning to the Fuehrer in his speech to the Chamber of Deputies yesterday, in which he described the European situation as more serious than at any time in the last 20 years.

The French premier is not the man to speak lightly or frivolously. Possibly his pessimism was based on the same report that Henri de Kerillis, the prominent nationalist deputy, gives to his readers in his newspaper L'Epoque this morning.

Kerillis states that last Saturday an important conference was held by Hitler with some of his chief advisers, including Field Marshal Goering, Propanganda Minister Goebbels, Von Ribbentrop and Himmler.

At this conference, Hitler, speaking with great vehemence and in a strain of exaltation, is reported to have exclaimed: "The die is cast. We cannot retreat. Our backs are against the wall. It's not a question of knowing if I'm right or wrong in posing so brutally the Danzig problem.

"What is done is done, and we must accept the consequences. We must have our way, whatever the cost in the few weeks which still separate us from the autumn months.

"The Hour for Risk"

"Some of you will perhaps tell me that if that is my decision a general war will result. If so, so much the worse. I do not believe that we can meet in the future circumstances much more favorable than those that exist today.

"I hold that Germany, Italy and Japan are in a position to conquer today all their enemies combined. The hour has therefore sounded to take the supreme risk."

According to Kerillis, Goering and Goebbels advanced the counsel of moderation, while Ribbentrop

Over the Coffee

By Harlan Miller

GILT OFF THE DOME

As the reporters flock into the President's oval office on Tuesdays and Fridays for his press conference, there's always a minute or two when he exchanges pleasantries, badinage and wisecracks with the veterans in the front row. The give and take is informal and catch-as-catch-can, in the best Roosevelt tradition. Sometimes it gets rough.

Harlan Miller

But even these offhand remarks are duly recorded by the expert stenographer, Henry Kannee, who always sits at the President's left. If these bits of repartee could be rescued from the White House archives and published they'd make more refreshing reading than some White House utterances. Not epigrams, exactly, but rugged fun.

DICTATOR'S JOKE: No one in England dared print it, but among Chamberlain's cronies it's common gossip that every time the Prime Minister talks of his Munich chats with Hitler he gets hot under the collar. Not because Hitler flimflammed him; oh, no. Because Hitler kept ribbing him about the great English sport of grouse-shooting.

"—Hitler ribbed a tradition"

In the midst of serious arguments about the Czechs, Sudetens, frontiers, minorities, realms of influence and the like, Hitler kept reverting to what he called the silly sport of shooting little birds. "Do you really enjoy slaughtering those little grouse?" Hitler kept asking. This unnerved Chamberlain, because grouse-shooting is a great English ritual. Would Hitler enjoy shooting bigger game? That's the riddle.

Nothing has been said about it, but one big reason why Mussolini isn't overeager for war is that Rome is more vulnerable to French bombers than is London to German bombers.

Il Duce's offices at the Palazzo Venetia and his home, the Villa Torlonia, are less than two hours hop from the great concealed French air bases on the isle of Corsica, and his Italians are very sensitive to bombing.

It's a White House secret that Cordell Hull, after a short time as Secretary of State, was fed up and listened receptively to pleas from fellow Tennesseeans that he resign and run for the Senate.

"Why not?" he said in effect. "I've never had a word of praise or appreciation from the President." This oversight rankled.

"—Hull's first bouquet from FDR"

So the Tennesseeans went to the White House and asked if the President would object to Hull's withdrawal from the Cabinet. The President's reaction was so emphatic that it could almost have been heard by the tourists at the other end of the White House.

* * * *

"What!" he said. "Give up Hull? Why, he's my right-hand man, a tower of strength, one man I can always rely upon. He's done a magnificent job. I couldn't get along without him."

That was Hull's first bouquet across the street. He decided to remain in the Cabinet.

Hanes Urges Tax on Bonds For Recovery

Idle Money Would Go to Work, He Tells House Committee

John W. Hanes, Undersecretary of the Treasury, yesterday asked the House Ways and Means Committee to encourage investment of idle funds by drafting a double-barreled tax bill reducing top surtax rates on individual incomes and ending atx exemption of Federal, State and municipal securities.

High surtaxes and tax exemption for securities, he said, have operated together to hem in the investment stream. To open this channel and stimulate use of idle money to make jobs for idle workers, he declared, they should be dealth

Tax exemption of securities, he asserted, should be terminated in the interest of more just taxation. It benefits taxpayers with large incomes, local governments and some States, he said, but "everyone else loses."

Hanes testified at the opening of hearings by the committee on proposed legislation to end tax exemption.

Persons with large incomes, Hanes declared, will put their money in tax- exempt securities as long as they are available, and "these people are precisely the ones who, because of their ability to assume risks, should use their funds for industrial undertakings."

The eFderal Government, he said, loses between $179,000,000 and $337,000,000 annually in revenue because of tax-exemt securities. This is partly offset by savings on interest charges on Government securities, because of tax exemption, ranging between $19,000,000 and $50,000,000. State and municipal governments save between $40,000,000 and $105,000,000 in lower interest rates on their securities.

High surtax rates have tended to drive persons with lareg incomes to buy tax-exempt securities, he explained. At the same time, he said, availability of tax-exempt securities may have been partly responsible for the high surtax rates. Hanes thought one reason they have been raised to presetn levels was to collect some tax from people who were evading taxation by buying tax-exemtpt investments.

He submitted estimates as to the revenue loss from various proposed reductions in the surtax rate. If the 75 per cent top rate were cut to 70 per cent, he said, the Government would lose $1,200,000 annually in revenue. If reduced to 60 per cent, the loss would be about $12,600,000, and if cut to 50 per cent, $44,800,000.

Directors Liable In New Trust Bill

King was reminded by Joseph I. O'Connell, Treasury representative on the Monopoly Committee, that the Justice Department, in preparing a barrage of antitrust suits to break building prices, was making a study of agreements between labor unions and their employers. The unions are American Federation of Labor members.

L. Seth Schnittman, New York, consulting economist on the construction industry, told the committee that "rigidities" hampering home construction would not be broken until the Home Owners Loan Corporation, life insurance companies, building and loan associations and other financing concerns "faced reality" and began selling some $4,000,000,000 of foreclosed properties.

The HOLC, which he said now owns about 90,000 foreclosed homes, has been trying its best to liquidate, but is not selling much below market prices. It might lead the way, he declared, in a general three to five year program of disposing of foreclosed properties at below market prices.

By breaking market prices in this way, he believed, home construction would be stimulated. Representative Williams (Democrat), Missouri, a committee member, described the latter assertion as a "novel view."

"I'll admit it is unorthodox," Schnittman replied.

Carleton A. Smith, of the Chicago realty firm of Smith & Dawson, testified that, although he made large-scale purchases of building materials for a home development project, he was prevented by the Material Merchants Association of Cook County from buying direct from producers of the materials. He had to buy from retailers, he said.

In response to questions, he said union rules required the firm to farm out to subcontractors all plumbing, heat installation, glazing, electrical work and plastering. He said he could buy lumber and window sash anywhere. But the window panes could be put in only by a glazing subcontractor.

The Administration is attempting to show, through the presentation now being made before the Monopoly Committee, the "deterrents" in the way of housing construction. The contention advanced is that labor unions are "used" by employers to maintain high prices.

Barton Criticizes Thorkelson Talk

Representative Barton (Republican), of New York, told the House yesterday that reference by Representative Thorkelson (Republican), of Montana, to certain Jewish legislators during a statement denouncing communism was in "inexcusably bad taste."

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste.

Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills. Adv.

Swedes Expect Trade Boom 'Barring War,' Says Official

GUSTAVE MOLLER

Moller, Commerce Minister, Declares Country Should Have Banner Year, Then Turns to His CCC Camp Visit

Sweden expects a banner year in foreign trade, "barring a European war," Gustave Moller, Swedish minister of commerce, declared here yesterday.

The Baltic kingdom's exports and imports give every indication of equaling their total value in the record-breaking year of 1937, the cabinet member said, "but if the international situation is disturbed that will be a different matter."

Moller is in Washington for two days on a three-week visit to the United States. He made the principal speech last Sunday for Swedish Day at the New York World's Fair.

Housing improvements are now Sweden's "deepest concern from the social standpoint," Moller said. The country's unemployed number only 16,000, he explained, "and our general economic situation is very good."

Germany purchases from 70 to 80 per cent of Sweden's iron ore, "but has not increased its imports this year," he stated.

Moller insisted that international affairs "are not part of my job," speedily shifting the conversation to "your very beautiful city" and his "extremely interesting experience" in visiting the CCC camp at Fort Hunt, Va.

the Dixie soared away on her journey to Horta, Lisbon and Marseille.

The flying boat, whose wing spread is 62 feet greater than the over-all length of Christopher Columbus's flagship, the Santa Maria, has sleeping quarters for 40, and flight decks comparable to a ship's bridge.

Six of the 22 passengers are women. Mrs. Clara Adams, of Maspeth, N. Y., a veteran of history-making flights, planned to keep on going after she reached Europe, and circle the world on regular passenger planes in 16 days.

Another passenger, Julius Rappaport, Allentown, Pa., attorney, also planned a globe-circling journey.

All the passengers have had flying experience, and most are veterans of the airways. Several heads of corporations were in the group that paid $375 one way fare or $675 round trip.

The schedule called for a one-hour refueling stop at Horta, and an overnight stop at Lisbon, the clipper continuing to Marseille the next day, in a total elapsed time of 48 hours out of New York.

The return trip is to start Sunday.

Eck, a vice president of the Southern Railway, said he applied for space on the first transoceanic flight with passengers as far back as 1931, "and I've been calling up every few months since then—just to hurry them up."

Wage Law Called 'Insanely Brutal'

Atlanta, June 28 (AP).—The national wage law was termed an "insanely brutal device, worthy of carpetbagger days, today by the owner of a small Southern cotton mill opposing a 32½ cents an hour textile wage minimum proposed.

John F. Schenck, sr., of Landale, N. C., the mill owner, testifying at a hearing before Wage-Hour Administrator Elmer F. Andrews, called Thad Stevens the leader of a "cruel and vindictive group" that sought to oprpess the South after the War eBtween the States, and asserted:

would be forced to bow to the President.

Both parties to the Senate trade yesterday reasserted their faith in it and privately threatened filibuster if either the silver price increase or the devaluation repealer are dropped in conference. Responding to the President's Hyde Park attack on the Senate action, Senator Pittman (Democrat), of Nevada, denied the Government pays the silver producer any "bonus," but, in fact, takes a bonus itself by coining half the silver purchased in standard silver dollars, and credits itself with the rest at $1.29 an ounce.

Meanwhile, the Treasury, for the second time in two days cut its price for foreign silver, this time from 40 to 38½ cents an ounce. This compared with a 43-cent foreign silver purchase price prior to Wednesday.

Despite Mexican alarm at the Senate's action, the foreign silver ban was expected to hold in any conference agreement. Silver sales to the United States have been a vital factor in Mexican economy. Yesterday the Mexican peso dropped to a range of 17.70-19.25 cents in foreign exchange markets, the lowest in more than a year. Yesterday the price stood at 20.15 cents.

Conferees, favorable, 3 to 2, to the Administration's money views, were appointed by Vice President Garner and Speaker Bankhead. Besides Wagner, Senate conferees include Majority Leader Barkley, Byrnes, of South Carolina, and Adams, of Colorado, Democrats, and Senator Townsend (Republican), of Delaware. To serve with Somers on the House conference committee, Bankhead named Cochran, of Missouri, and Larrabee, of Indiana, Democrats, and Reed, of Illinois, and Andresen, of Minnesota, Republicans. Conferees originally slated a night meeting, but Wagner said this was later called off in favor of a conference today.

"Make Hair Grow while the sun shines"

"It is a well known phenomenon that in the summer the growth of hair is more rapid," says Dr. Arnold Lorand, Vienna Dermatologist.

THAT Hair grows faster in the summer than at any other season is an established scientific fact. You can take advantage of this seasonal peculiarity by starting Thomas' hair and scalp treatment at once.

Your hair will respond more quickly to this famous proved method of treatment now than at any other time. Within an unusually short time your dandruff will disappear, hairfall will stop, and new hair will actually be visible on the thin and bald spots. Call at the Thomas' office and talk your problem over with the specialist in charge. He will gladly examine your scalp without charge or obligation and frankly tell you what Thomas' treatment can do for you.

Miss Perkins Says 180,000 Got Jobs in May

Month Usually Shows Decline; Rise In Building Marked

Secretary of Labor Perkins yesterday reported a May gain of 180,000 workers employed in nonagricultural industries, an unusual condition, as these industries generally slack off at this season. The return of 80,000 bituminous coal miners to their jobs between mid-April and Mid-May helped accelerate the increase.

While factory employment slumped, due to labor differences which affected more than 36,000 in the automobile industry during the past month, substantial gains were registered in private and public construction. This increase in construction might well be expected to continue for the next five or six months, the period it will take for completion of many projects.

Aircraft and ship building employment is increasing, largely because of the Government's national defense program. Shipbuilding may be expected to continue in the upper brackets through 1940, Secretary Perkins said. Employment in the aircraft industry during May was more than double that of a year ago. hipbuilding, which has climbed each month since last August, produced its highest employment since 1923, with the exception of April 1937.

In the retail trade, 8,000 employes and a gain of nearly $500,000 in weekly wages was reported during May.

What, if any, solutions are being reached in the A. F. of L. and C. I. O. negotiations were not disclosed by Secretary Perkins at her press conference, although she reiterated statements on her recent Western trip in which she had said that prospects for a settlement were good. Asked if they were better than five or six weeks ago, she answered that they were good "as always."

Asked if they were better than five or six weeks ago, she answered that they were god "as always."

She disclosed that she had seen members of the A. F. of L. peace committee, but that her talks with them could not be construed as meetings with the committee. She added that she was not taking part in the negotiations which, she said, were strictly the business, at this point, of the two labor organizations.

Abe Fortas Is Named Coal Agency Counsel

Abe Fortas, former general counsel of the PWA, yesterday was appointed general counsel of the Bituminous Coal Division of the Interior Department, set up under President Roosevelt's reorganization program in place of the National Bituminous Coal Commission.

Fortas also has been an assistant director in the public utilities division of the SEC, and has been connected with the AAA. He was born in Memphis, Tenn., in 1910.

Lodge Offers Economy Measure in Senate

Senator Henry Cabot Lodge (Republican), Massachusetts, yesterday offered a bill to require Government agencies to spend no more than 90 per cent of their 1940 appropriations. This economy move was launched yesterday with a similar bill by House Minority Leader Joseph W. Martin (Republican), Massachusetts.

Committee Reported Promising to Send Out Bill Barring U. S. Workers in Politics

By the Associated Press.

Members of the House Judiciary Committee were reported authoritatively yesterday to have promised Senator Hatch (Democrat), New Mexico, to send to the House today his bill to ban political activity by Government employes.

SEN. HATCH

Among other things, the measure would prohibit Federal workers from soliciting contributions or serving as delegates to political conventions. Officials responsible for national policy would be exempted. The bill has been approved by the Senate.

Reckless operation of a motorboat could cause a fine of $2,000 and a year in jail under legislation approved by the Senate Commerce Committee.

Chairman Bailey (Democrat), of North Carolina, said broad revision of the Federal motorboat law passed in 1910 was needed "because motorboats are so much faster nowadays."

Lights, whistels, bells, life preservers, fire extinguishers and Federal inspections would be required.

The treaty by which the United States would exchange 600,000 bales of cotton with Great Britain for approximately 175,000,000 pounds of rubber for war reserves was approved yesterday by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. It must be ratified by a two-thirds vote of the Senate to become effective.

Representative McCormack, of Massachusetts, a Democrat, proposed Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, the Republican House lead , for the G. O. P. nomination for the Presidency yesterday.

"The gentleman would make a good Republican candidate for President," McCormack said. "The Republican Party couldn't do anything better than put the gentleman from Massachusetts, Mr. Martin, on its ticket."

Martin, getting red in the face, jumped up and said: "I'm afraid the gentleman is compeltely disarming me."

The Oklahoma Congressional delegation disclosed it had written President Roosevelt indorsing the candidacy of Everett E. Duncan, of Oklahoma City, for appointment to the Federal Trade Commission. A vacancy on the commission is due September 25.

Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, returned to the Capitol after a week's treatment in Naval Hospital for a cold.

Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama, said President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace wanted a Government crop insurance program for cotton approved at this session of Congress.

The Senator obtained approval of the Senate Agriculture Committee for such insurance, similar to that now operating for wheat, and announced he would press for Congressional action.

He submitted the program to the Senate in the form of amendments to the present crop insurance act for wheat. It would cover cotton next season.

Wheeler Aloof To Vice Presidency

By the Associated Press.

Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, said yesterday he had been asked to be a candidate for Vice President in 1940 by "persons close to the Administration," but had rejected the offer.

Sources close to the Senator said the request had come from friends of President Roosevelt. These persons said a similar request had come from friends who are boosting Vice President Garner for the 1940 Democratic nomination.

Phony L. S. U. Bonds a Debt, Bankers Hold

Three 'Didn't Suspect' Dr. Smith; Governor Offers $2,500 Reward

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baton Rouge, La., June 28.—A sweeping investigation of the management of Louisiana State University, to include not only charges of embezzlement against the fugitive former president, Dr. James Monroe Smith, but "any criminal act of any person with whom he may have been associated," was demanded of the East Baton Rouge Parish grand jury this morning by District Judge Charles A. Holcombe.

A similar investigation was promised anew by the new Governor, Earl K. Long, following a conference this afternoon with the new acting president of the university, Dr. Paul M. Hebert, and other State officials.

The grand jury heard three witnesses:

They were Monte Hart, of Caldwell Brothers & Hart, contractors, and two New Orleans bank presidents, A. P. Imhorn, of the Hibernia National Bank, and Oliver Lucas, of the National Bank of Commerce.

Bankers Uphold Notes

The two New Orleans bankers agreed with Wade D. Bynum, president of the City National Bank of Baton Rouge, here this morning that they considered the notes they held from Smith, totaling $500,000, to be legal obligations of Louisiana State University.

At the offices of Attorney General Ellison, who has ruled that the notes are uncollectible and invalid, it was admitted the university, as a public corporation, may be sued by the banks without consent of the Legislature.

At 6 p. m., tonight, Gov. Long announced an offer of a reward of $2,500 for information leading to the arrest of Smith, supplementing the reward of $250 offered by the sheriff of East Baton Rouge Parish.

Gov. Long announced that a meeting of the university board of supervisors had been called for tomorrow and Dr. Hebert said he will ask that a nationally known accounting firm be brought to Baton Rouge to make a complete inspection of the university's finances.

Market Play Described

Further details as to how the missing university president apparently tried to corner the nation's wheat market with phoney bonds and unauthorized loans were revealed here today by Bynum and E. M. Brown, of New Orleans, Smith's broker.

It appears that after Fenner and Beane, New Orleans brokers, learned that the $475,000 in bonds which Smith had placed with them as collateral for his speculation were invalid, the university president went to three banks, borrowing $300,000 from one and $100,000 each from the two others on his signature as acting secretary of the university board of supervisors. To each of the banks he presented a resolution authorizing the borrowings, signed by himself as acting secretary of the board.

"We saw nothing unusual in this transaction," said Bynum, "in fact we went after the business when we heard Dr. Smith was borrowing in large amounts in New Orleans."

After Fenner and Beane had questioned the value of the collateral, Brown said, Smith brought him cashier's checks drawn up on the three banks from which he had borrowed, to deposit in place of the rejected bonds.

May Have $40,000

"The $500,000 was sufficient only to enable us to return the bond collateral to Dr. Smith," he said. "He told us this was all the cash he could give us, and we therefore immediately sold his remaining commitments at the market."

The invalid bonds were returned to Dr. Smith, and according to officials here he still may have them in his baggage in his flight with his wife. He is also believed to have most of $40,000 in cash.

Sellers Urges Broadening of Legal Training

Pleading for a broader groundwork for all studying for the legal profession, Ashley Sellers, chief attorney in the solicitor's office of the Department of Agriculture, addressed members of the Federal Bar Association at the weekly luncheon yesterday of the group at the National Press Club.

"At present," said Mr. Sellers, much of the emphasis in law school curriculum is placed on private law, which leaves the student when he graduates, unprepared to cope with the problems incident to phases of constitutional law, public utilities and trade relations.

"The present trend in the socialization of all problems makes it advisable for the lawyer to know how to handle these broader aspects as well as the more limited technicalities involved in cases presented to them."

Smallpox Gain Of 22% Disturbs Health Service

The United States Public Health Service is not only worried but irked because smallpox is still so common in this country.

It is worried, according to a report issued yesterday, because 15,000 cases were reported in 1938, 22 per cent more than in 1937, and irked because so many people refuse or neglect to be vaccinated.

Cline, a Texan, Takes Helm as Shrine Leader

Heim of Philadelphia Beats Zink, Lloyd For Outer Guard Post

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, June 28.—Shrinedom installed a 6 foot, 210-pound Texan as its imperial potentate today, and started a 50-year-old Philadelphia publisher along the 12-year climb to the same office.

Walter D. Cline, oil magnate and former Mayor of Wichita Falls, Tex., succeded A. A. D. Rahn, of Minneapolis, as ruler of some 300,000 fun-loving nobles of Masonry, climaxing business sessions of the annual convention. Memphis, Tenn., won the 1940 meeting.

For imperial outer guard, lowest-ranking official in the national council, the nobles picked William Heim, potentate of Philadelphia's Lu Lu Temple. He defeated Harold Lloyd, screen comedian, and John Zink, of Baltimore, director-general of the convention.

Move Automatically

All Shrine imperial officers move up automatically each year, with the outer guard the only office open to election. George F. Olendorf, of Springfield, Mo., became deputy imperial potentate, succeeding Cline, and becomes imperial potentate in 1940.

Leonard P. Steuart, of Almas Temple, Washington, a past imperial potentate, was re-elected imperial treasurer.

James H. Price, Governor of Virginia, was re-elected imperial recorder. F. Lawrence Walker, recorder of Almas Temple, of Washington, representative to the imperial council for 21 years, was elected emeritus life member.

Texans Enthusiastic

Cline took office amid a fanfare of typical Texan enthusiasm, receiving two bushels of Texas roses and a new automobile from the ten Shrine temples in the Lone Star State.

A drizzling rain in mid-afternoon failed to dampen Shriners' spirits, and dozens of nobles celebrated election of imperial council officers by dancing in the streets, blocking several main downtown traffic arteries.

Big event of the day's program, second only to the election, was the night parade along the route 12,000 uniformed nobles followed yesterday.

juries are common results of the use of fireworks. Last year's Fourth of July toll throughout the Nation, they reported, was 25 deaths, 43 cases of blindness in one or both eyes and nearly 8,000 serious injuries.

Celebrations at the Washington Monument Grounds will begin at 7:15 on Tuesday, with Senator Alben W. Barkley (Democrat), of Kentucky, making the main address. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, in charge of arrangements, yesterday declared the recent visit of the King and Queen of England should heighten this year's interest in the Fourth of July.

"In celebrating the winning of our independence," he said, "America also emphasizes a declaration of friendship to the great British Empire."

Holiday Order

The President's Executive order granting Government workers a holiday on Monday stated: "The several executive departments, independent establishments and other governmental agencies in the District of Columbia, including the Government Printing Office and the Navy Yard and naval stations, shall be closed all day on Monday, July 3, the day preceding Independence Day, and all employes in the Federal service in the District of Columbia and in the field service of the executive departments, independent establishments and other agencies of the Government, except those who may, for special public reason, be excluded from the provisions of this order by the heads of their respective departments, establishments or agencies, or those whose absence from duty would be inconsistent with the provisions of existing law, shall be excused from duty on that day."

Chairman Bates, of the House sub-committee on public health, yesterday disclosed he was returning $800 of unexpended House funds not used in the District milk inquiry.

The investigation cost $3,200, chiefly in salaries, and the House had appropriated $4,000. Services of Metropolitan police, however, were paid for by the District.

Capt. Rodgers Kills Self in Virginia Home

Retired Navy Officer Dies by Shotgun At Broad Run

A verdict of suicide was issued last night in the death of Capt. Christopher R. P. Rodgers, retired naval officer, who was found dead in his home at Broad Run, Va., earlier in the day, with a shotgun wound in his chest.

Dr. George H. Davis, Fauquier County coroner, who issued the certificate, said Capt. Rodgers was alone in the house at the time, except for a housekeeper. Two shots were fired, Dr. Davis said, the first blowing a hole in the ceiling. Rodgers had gone to Warrenton, Va., early in the morning, Dr. Davis said, and purchased some shotgun shells.

A native of Pennsylvania, Capt. Rodgers entered the Naval Academy in 1900, and after graduation he served until his retirement in 1930 at his own request. During his active career, he had several duty assignments in Washington, and acted as naval aide to the White House for a number of years. He was also naval attache to the Netherlands at one time.

Survivors include his mother, a son, Christopher R. P. Rodgers, jr.; a daughter, Mrs. Virginia Rodgers Barker, of Washington, and his former wife, Mrs. Philip O. Coffin, whose father, George Von L. Meyer, was Secretary of the Navy under President Taft.

Denver, June 28 (AP).—A record of scaling every 14,000-foot mountain in the 48 States—never accomplished by any individual so far as records show—is the July goal of three Denver men and an 11-year-old boy.

With two companions, they will set out Friday to climb 13 towering peaks in California and one in Washington, the only ones they have yet to conquer, as listed by the United States Geological Survey. The 51 other 14,000-foot peaks in the Nation are in Colorado.

Actress Slain, Police Study 2 Other Cases

Death of Silent Movie Star Linked To Murder, Attack

By the Associated Press.

Hollywood, June 28.—The hammer slaying of Margaret Campbell, 56, silent screen actress, prompted police to focus attention as well today on the unsolved killing of a young dancer and an attack on another girl.

All three had been connected with the Los Angeles City College dramatic department.

The new angle was studied as officers sought Mrs. Campbell's studious 23-year-old son, Campbell MacDonald, for questioning.

Police Capt. Dalton Patton said there might be some connection between the slaying of Mrs. Campbell and the unsolved killing of Anya Sosoyeva, pretty Russian dancer. She was bludgeoned to death on the college campus the night of last February 24 while cast in a dramatic production at the college.

A few weeks later, Delia Bogard, who also took part in college plays, was wounded seriously while near the campus.

Mrs. Campbell recently was an instructor in the college dramatic department. Capt. Patton said he had been informed young MacDonald had been a classmate of Miss Sosoyeva and had attended a private dramatic school with Miss Bogard.

Mrs. Campbell, dead 24 hours or more, was found late yesterday lying half nude across a bed. Near her head was a blood-stained claw hammer.

The dead woman, secretary of the Spiritual Assembly of the Bahai, a group described as studying Oriental philosophy, was in moving pictures in the early twenties.

Judge Admits 'Confession' at Bullock Trial

Willie Bullock's alleged confession to the murder of Police Officer George Shinault on August 14, 1932, will be read to a District Court jury this morning, following the decision by Justice Laws yesterday afternoon to admit it as evidence.

Bullock testified yesterday he signed the paper only after he was severely beaten and kicked by Detective Sergeants A. M. Tolson and William J. Liverman, and said he had no idea what he signed as he cannot read.

Justice Laws said he would give the jury specific instructions as to the weight to be attached to the document. The jury was barred from the room while Bullock testified.

Tolson and Liverman emphatically denied any form of coercion, while Investigator Allen B. Baker declared the 39-year-old colored man admitted the shooting to him orally, but said he did not know he was shooting a policeman.

Majority Rules In Appeals Court—Or Does It?

Justice Miller, who dissented, wrote the Court of Appeals decision which yesterday granted a new trial for Nan K. Witters, convicted in the lower courts of having received stolen property.

Lawyers, scrambling for a copy of the decision, said it was the first time they had seen the "minority write the majority report."

The justice made out a good case for himself, scattering his views through the five pages—although the minority usually has only a paragraph at the very end.

3 Michigan Architects Win On Smithsonian Gallery Design

Eliel Saarinen, His Son, Eero, and J. Robert F. Swanson Will Receive $7,500, Plus $82,000 if Project Is Completed

Three Michigan architects, collaboring on a single design, were announced yesterday as the winners of a national competition on plans for the proposed Smithsonian Gallery of Art Building.

They are Eliel Saarinen, his son, Eero, and J. Robert F. Swanson, associates at the Cranbrook Academy of Art at Bloomfield Hills, Mich., of which the elder Saarinen is director.

They will receive a $7,500 prize, plus a fee of $82,000, if the project goes to completion. Congress to date has appropriated only $40,000 to defray expenses of the Smithsonian Gallery of Art Commission, which conducted the competition.

Runner-up in the Nation-wide architectural contest was Percival Goodman, of New York, whose prize is $3,500.

Winners Told at Luncheon

Names of the winners were announced by Representative Kent E. Keller (Democrat), of Illinois, chairman of the House Library Committee, at a luncheon given in the Treasury's fine arts section by its chief, Edward Bruce.

A site south of the Mall, directly opposite the National Gallery of Art, now under construction, has been chosen for the proposed museum.

The Saarinen-Swanson design calls for a practical, yet ornamental, building of marble and granite which "has been most logically thought out," in the words of Joseph Hudnut, professor of architecture at Harvard and the commission's professional adviser.

No Ornate Trimmings

The building will have no ornate domes or columns, said Hudnut, and will be much smaller than the National (Mellon) Gallery of Art, which is almost as large as the Capitol.

The elder Saarnen was born in Finland in 1873. He designed many outstanding buildings in his homeland, perhaps the most notable of which is the Helsingfors Railway Station. In 1923, a year before he joined the University of Michigan faculty, Saarinen won second prize in the Chicago Tribune tower competition.

When the Cranbrook Academy of Art was founded in 1925 he became its director. Among his recent commissions are the design of a theater at William and Mary College and plans for a concert hall in the Berkshires for the Boston Symphony Orchestra.

Son Educated in Paris

Eero, his son, also is Finnish born. He was educated in Paris and at the Yale school of architecture. The award comes as a sort of wedding present, as he was married only last week. He has been associated with his father since 1927 and is 35 years old.

Swanson, a native of Michigan, was graduated from Ann Arbor in 1922 and has been a practicing architect since 1924. He is the husband of Eliel Saarinen's daughter.

Goodman, the runner-up, is 35. He won the Paris prize at the age of 21, though he had no formal education.

Total of 408 Designs

Among those present at the luncheon were members of the jury which made the awards: Frederic A. Delano, chairman; John A. Holabird, Walter Gropius, George Howe and Henry R. Shepley.

A total of 408 designs was submitted in the first stage of the competition, from which 10 finalists were chosen. Prizes of $1,000 each will go to the other eight.

D. C. Man Hurt in Crash Recovering in Indiana

David Stolaroff, of 1776 Massachusetts avenue northwest, was reported recovering in Rensselaer, Ind., yesterday from injuries sustained in an auto accident last Saturday. Simon Klebanow, 19, of Brooklyn, N. Y., a passenger in his car, died Tuesday as a result of the accident.

Agricultural Bill Sent to President

By International News Service.

Extracting the record-breaking $1,200,000,000 Agriculture Department supply bill from the legislative log jam, the House and Senate yesterday completed Congressional action on a conference report and sent it to the White House for President Roosevelt's signature.

Existing funds to operate the activities of the department expire tomorrow midnight—the end of the present fiscal year. The new bill carries $225,000,000 in unbudgeted funds for farm parity payments and large sums for tenant loans and surplus crop disposal.

Employe of Club, Violating Rules, Drowns in Pool

Theodore Roosevelt Nichols, 43, colored, of 1924 Rosedale street northeast, was drowned yesterday in the Manor Club swimming pool on Georgia avenue extended. Nichols was a waiter at the club.

Montgomery County police said he and several companions went swimming against the rules of the club. Club employes, members of the fire and police departments recovered the body, which is now at the Pumphries funeral home in Rockville.

A certificate of accidental death was issued by Dr. C. E. Hawkes, Montgomery County coroner.

U. S. to Defy Japan, Stay at Menaced Ports

Gauss Warns Nippon Against Infringement At Foochow, Wenchow

Shanghai, June 28.—A firm American rejection of a Japanese warning for all foreign vessels to leave the ports of Wenchow and Foochow by noon Thursday (11 p. m. Wednesday, Eastern standard time) marked today's developments in Japan's friction with Western Nations along the China coast.

Japan's warning accompanied a declaration of her intention to occupy the two ports. Already Japan has seized nearly all China's major coastal cities. Only a few minor ports in the south remain in Chinese hands.

Clarence E. Gauss, United States consul general at Shanghai, notified Japanese officials that Japan would be held responsible for any damage to American interests in such operations.

Tension Relaxed in Tientsin

Meanwhile there was marked lessening of tension at Tientsin, where the Japanese army has been blockading the British and French concessions since June 14. This coincided with the announcement that Japan had agreed to negotiate at Tokyo for settlement of the crisis. Tientsin food conditions are greatly improved.

From the foreign mission colony at Foochow, where 20 Americans live, came a message saying "all remaining," apparently referring to all foreigners. Eighteen foreign missionaries, including Americans, were reported to have left Wenchow by a British steamer.

Gauss reasserted the declaration of Admiral Harry E. Yarnell, commander of the United States Asiatic Fleet, that American naval vessels would go where necessary to protect American citizens.

The British and French yesterday took a similar stand regarding Foochow and Wenchow, which lie about 500 and 300 miles south of Shanghai, respectively.

Today there were no United States naval vessels at either of the two ports. The Japanese were reported preparing for direct attacks against them.

Swatow Ban Defied

Simultaneously, according to the United Press, British warships defied Japan's blockade of Swatow, 260 miles south of Foochow, and escorted the British steamer Seistan into the harbor where Japanese sentries have erected barbed-wire barricades around the British dock area.

Chinese said Japanese troops had taken over and proclaimed a "state of emergency" at Sharp Peak, a foreign settlement about 30 miles from Swatow, where the British destroyers Daring and Duchess prepared to remove a number of British nationals—Editor's Note).

Parley Faces Snag

By the Associated Press.

Tokyo, June 28.—Japan has accepted Britain's proposal that they seek a settlement of their Tientsin crisis at a Tokyo conference table, but tonight important differences of view as to the parley's scope cropped out.

British spokesmen (including Prime Minister Chamberlain in London insisted that only local issues connected with the Japanese army's 15-day-old blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin would be considered.

But Japanese, especially military leaders, indicated that demands for Britain's "cooperation" in Japan's program for a "new order in east Asia," especially its economic phases, would figure vitally in the negotiations.

Statements of Japanese military men indicated that a major Japanese objective would be to compel Britain to agree to end her financial aid to the Chinese government at Chungking.

Japanese Terms

Domei (Japanese news agency) reported the Japanese army's minimum demands were:

Joint British-Japanese control of "terrorism."

Suppression of "anti-Japanese activities" within the concession.

Full co-operation on economic developments in North China.

The surrender of 48,000,000 yuan—currently about $6,369,000—held in British banks in the Tientsin concession to the Japanese-dominated Peiping government. This money was deposited by Chinese government organs driven from North China and the Japanese insist the Peiping regime is now the rightful owner.

Authoritative quarters said the blockade, which began over the refusal of British officials to surrender to Japanese four Chinese accused of a killing, would be relaxed somewhat when the negotiations open.

(Japan has tried to drive Chinese currency out of the Chinese areas she has occupied and supplant it by a currency of her own. British support of Chinese currency through British banks' subscription to a currency stabilization fund has been a major obstacle to Japanese success.)

Nazis Prepare for Showdown With Democracies, Paris Hears

Associated Press WIREPHOTO.

Reports from Gdynia (shown), Poland's port close to the Free City of Danzig (shown), said that a German military plane had been fired on by Polish coast artillery. Despite denials in Germany, reports of the alleged formation of a "free corps" in the Free City continued and Himmler presented radical views.

Goebbels, the propaganda minister, is said to have pointed out to his chief that the democracies were stiffening.

"They will fall to their knees when it comes to a showdown," was Hitler's reply. "The bourgoisie, well fed and consequently pacific, will impose the peace."

Poland May Declare War

Kerillis, who is close to high French army circles, quotes that the French general staff believes that the order of events in the unfolding of the Danzig drama will be the following:

The Danzig Senate will proclaim the annexation of the Free City to the Reich, which will immediately proceed to send in an army of occupation;

Poland will reply by declaring war on the Reich;

This measure will drag England and France into the conflict.

French general staff circles are of the opinion that the Germans will invade Poland simultaneously from east Prussia, the Reich proper and Slovakia, in the hope of crushing the Poles forthwith.

At the same time, Hitler will issue a pacific declaration to England and France, promising to enter into a disarmament agreement, if only they will let him have Danzig and the Corridor.

If the democracies hesitate, the Germans will invade Holland, Belgium and Switzerland, and repeat their tactics of issuing promises. A refusal by England and France to accept the fait accompli will be followed by the launching of mass air attacks on London and Paris.

Polish Fleet Masses

By the United Press.

Warsaw, June 28.—The entire Polish fleet and several units of the nation's 1,000,000 troops under arms tonight moved into the Baltic seaport of Gdynia adjoining the Free City of Danzig for tomorrow's celebration of the annual "sea day."

The display of naval and military strength in the Polish corridor port coincided with persistent reports that Germany was sending military leaders into Danzig and organizing a Nazi "free corps."

President Moscicki will address the Polish people by radio from Gdynia at noon tomorrow and is expected to give pointed warning to Reichsfuehrer Hitler that Poland is strong and is determined to hold her Baltic seacoast even if it means war.

In Berlin, a high German authority admitted Danzig was strengthening its defense forces but denied that thousands of Germans were slipping into the city to join the "free corps."

Reliable neutral informants in Danzig said a large number of young Germans from the Reich had arrived there and were being housed in newly-built barracks near the city.

The Exchange Telegraph Company (British news agency) reported, for instance, these developments:

Four thousand German officers and men entered Danzig in the last 24 hours;

One thousand horses have been requisitioned for the "free corps;"

The corps drilled at Seidnitz today with light machine guns;

Three thousand pigs have been slaughtered and stored for its use;

Gas masks have been distributed to Danzig police and German arrivals;

Danzig shipyards have ben ordered to dismiss Polish workmen;

German teachers in the free city have been ordered to stay in Danzig during the summer holidays.

Germans discounted rumors abroad, particularly in Paris, that Hitler planned to stage a "Danzig coup" this week-end and said they were confident Danzig would be restored to the Reich without bloodshed.

"We Have Only to Wait"

"Our policy is to refrain from any move which would precipitate a general war," a German leader said. "We have only to wait."

There were reports that Heinrich Himmler, chief of the Nazi Gestapo (secret police) and one of Hitler's chief lieutenants, had arrived incognito in Danzig.

Reports reaching Warsaw tonight said German police and soldiers were filtering quietly but rapidly into Danzig in large numbers and were being equipped with machine guns and cannon. German army officers, alleged to have been "imported" from East Prussia, were said to be training the "Free Corps."

(A dispatch from Danzig yesterday said the Free City's predominantly Nazi police force was to be strengthened by several hundred men trained along military lines.

(Rumors in Berlin said the new police units were well-trained Germans instead of Danzigers.)

Although apprehensive, the Polish people took a calm view of the troubles with Germany and appeared to be placing their faith in the 1,000,000 or more men under arms along the frontiers and confidence that, if Poland is compelled to fight, Britain and France must aid her.

Authoritative Nazi sources said today that Polish coastal batteries fired several shots when a German seaplane flew along the Polish coast Tuesday but did not hit it.

The incident led to alarming rumors Tuesday night that the Poles had shot down a German military plane.

Bill for 5,500 War Planes Reported Out

Senate Committee Writes in Extensive Map-Making Project

Winding up Congressional action on the Administration's special defense program, the Senate Appropriations Committee yesterday reported the $293,985,547 supplemental Army supply bill, carrying funds to expand America's air power to 5,500 first-line planes.

At the same time, the War Department awarded the largest order for aircraft engines placed since the World War, letting three contracts totaling $25,009,389 for latest type high-powered motors. The number of engines bought was not disclosed, but one military source estimated that close to 2,000 would be delivered for installation in new pursuit ships and attack bombers.

In approving the supplemental defense bill the State committee wrote in an amendment authorizing Government agencies to begin an extensive map-making project throughout the United States and authorized diversion of $5,000,000 for the purpose.

Only one change was made in the bill—$1,200,000 was added for construction at Lowry Field, Colo. The measure provides $223,398,047 in cash and $70,497,500 in contract authorization for constructing 2,467 new warplanes, strengthening the defenses of the Panama Canal and extending the "educational orders" program launched last year.

Besides planes, new air bases will be established in Alaska, Puerto Rico, Panama and northeastern and southeastern United States. A new air depot also would be provided in the latter area. No attempt was made by Army officials to get the Senate committee to restore the $18,000,000 cut from the "educational orders" fund in the House.

Officials informed the Senate that only 25 per cent of the United States was now accurately mapped and that at the present rate, it would take 100 years to complete the project.

The largest of the three airplane engine contracts went to the Allison Engineering Co., Indianapolis. It totaled $15,080,261, for 12-cylinder, 1,000 horsepower, liquid-cooled motors, to be installeed in new pursuit planes. To Wright Aeronautical Corp., Patterson, N. J., went an $8,975,317 order for double row, radial, air-cooled engines similar to those installed on the new transatlantic clipper ships. The Pratt and Whitney division of United Aircraft Corp. received a $953,810 award for single-row, radial, air-cooled motors of 500 horsepower, to be placed in new basic combat planes.

Britain Proposes Parley With Nazis

a considerable supply of free exchange was made available to Germany for the acquisition of raw materials . . .

"His Majesty's government looks forward to further discussion for improvement of Germany's economic position if only the essential precondition could be assured—namely, establishment of the mutual confidence and good will which form a necessary preliminary to calm and unprejudiced negotiations."

Britain then criticized the abrupt termination of the Anglo-German naval treaty of 1935, declaring the pact was a permanent one and termination had been contemplated only by mutual consent.

The British government, according to the note, is always ready to consider the possibility of reaching "a clear, categorical understanding" on the matter of qualitative provisions.

If Germany contemplates opening negotiations on a new naval treaty, the note said, Britain would be glad to receive an indication of the scope and purpose and "in particular His Majesty's government would desire to know when such discussions may take place, and how the German government proposes to ensure" against unilateral denunciation of any new agreement.

Neutrality Repeal Sentiment Appears

This, he said, would apply to a restricted trade in guns and cartridges, and would not prohibit shipment of planes, automobiles and the broader "implements of war." Barton pointed out that nations threatened with aggression were not short of guns and cartridges, but needed other manufactured materials which we can produce.

As Republicans divided on the neutrality issue, Representative Vorys, of Ohio, minority committeeman, led a fresh G. O. P. assault on revision of the present act, charging the President wanted "to use our power to preserve the balance of power in Europe." Vorys said he did not believe the President had any more intention of taking this country into war than he had "six years ago of taking it into debt, but "if you spend enough you get into debt and if you bluff enough you get into war."

Resuming his fight on arms embargo repeal, which he charges will align the United States definitely with Britain and France, Representative Tinkham (Republican), of Massachusetts, berated the President for not invoking the arms embargo in the Sino-Japanese war and declared he "should be impeached" for his failure to do so.

Eaton Contemplates Bill

Representative Eaton (Republican), of New Jersey, who will vote for the bill, said he might offer an amendment banning war material shipments to Japan.

Committee Democrats, who Monday made last-minute concessions by withdrawing provisions authorizing Presidential regulation of travel in "combat zones" established by him, may hold a final strategy conference this morning to weigh their strength before the showdown.

Barton appealed to the House not to "tie the hands of the President and Secretary of State by statutory restrictions if they would preserve peace. If Congress refuses at this time to repeal the arms embargo, he said the odds were overwhelming that they would be called on to do so after hostilities opened. That, he said, would be "an act of war."

Visualizing the possible bombing of London or Paris after Congress adjourns, Barton asked, "Does anyone in the House believe that any mere statute could stand a single day against the tidal wave of moral indignation that would sweep across our land? Would not an outraged public opinion compel the President to call us into immediate emergency session for repeal of section 1 of the present law?"

Return to International Law

The more realistic course, Barton said, would be to repeal the arms embargo or repeal all neutrality legislation and return to international law, permitting the weaker nations "to purchase their means of defense in the markets of the world."

Wadsworth struck a similar note. He said he would vote for return to international law "with all my heart." He said the arms embargo was "a source of danger to the United States, and I think it will be eliminated." And he declared it was impossible for Congress to write into law "a rule of conduct which is proof against all events."

Wadsworth said he opposed granting the President added discretionary war powers, but declared "let's not legislate in any way to undermine the Presidential office."

"Freedom of Action"

"The safety of peace," Wadsworth told the House, "lies in retention of the right to do what is best when the time comes—no binding, inflexible rule, but freedom of action."

Shanley told members that five years of efforts toward neutrality legislation had produced nothing but "regret" and Congress should not again attempt binding neutrality legislation.

"I want a bill to take neutrality out of our laws," said Shanley. "I believe there is enough in international law."

When some Republicans cheered, he said:

"I hope that applause will be with us tomorrow when the amendment comes up."

Friends Opposed Roosevelt's New Lending Program

By International News Service.

Expressions of general opposition to self-liquidating lending plans, voiced by both Administration and Congressional leaders several days prior to President Roosevelt's announcement of just such a plan involving $3,860,000,000, were revealed yesterday.

Criticism of such a plan in testimony at secret hearings of the Senate Appropriations Committee came from Secretary of Interior Ickes, Assistant PWA Administrator Harold Gray, and Senators McKellar, of Tennessee, Adams, of Colorado, and O'Mahoney, of Wyoming, all Democrats.

Gray objected to projects entailed in such a program as providing the Government no recourse for recovery of funds in case contracts are not fulfilled, and cited past experiences in construction of city streets and other facilities.

McKellar pointed out the unpopularity with the motoring public of toll bridges, one of the major type projects provided for in the President's announcement a few days later.

Both Adams and O'Mahoney expressed belief Government loans definitely cannot restore economic well-being.

Rain or No, 500 Children Revel At Elks' Outing

Not When There Are Bands and Clowns And Merry-Go-Rounds

A fellow doesn't mind a little rain when there are clowns and bands and pink lemonade and merry-go-rounds.

That is the opinion of Johnny Baker, 11, of St. Joseph's Orphanage, who was one of nearly 500 children guests of Washington Lodge, No. 15, B. P. O. Elks, at Glen Echo Park yesterday. Children from St. Vincent's, St. John's, Baptist Home, St. Joseph's, Washington City, Masonic and Eastern Star, Swartzell Home and the German Orphanage were present at the twenty-seventh annual outing.

That it rained for the first time in the series of 27 outings bothered Johnny and his friends not a bit. They were so busy laughing at clowns in the morning, riding in closed sideshows during the afternoon and eating all day that it seldom occurred to them it was raining.

Billy Gee, formerly with Ringling Brothers, and Charles Welch, the famous fire-eater, were there with a dozen other clowns. Johnny Grey, an Elk who used to run his own minstrel show, led the clowns through hilarious performances for Johnny and his friends, and put on a one-man puppet show.

Clown Is Favorite

Johnny's ambition is to be a baseball player when he grows up, and he certainly was glad to hear Tom Griffith, the famous one-time ball player, speak. Joe Hague and Jimmie Bludlow, two younger Washington players, also were present, and Johnny and many of the other fellows nearly stopped the show by clustering around them and requesting autographs.

The black-faced clown was Johnny's favorite. He thought Rita Johnson, the youthful tap dancer, was pretty swell, too, but a fellow doesn't want to show a girl he likes her too much.

After lunch in the ballroom there were free rides. The roller-coaster is Johnny's favorite, as it is with most of the children, but the rain kept them on the ground. The merry-go-round was a lot of fun even though you didn't go so fast.

After more lemonade and sandwiches, they took a sleepy ride home in buses with pleasant memories of a day well spent.

Relief Fund Raised, Arts Aid Reduced

that the President had asked only $123,000,000.

The Senate restored to WPA the $125,000,000 that had been earmarked in the House for PWA, and it knocked out the House-approved three-man administrative board as well as a formula for allocating relief to the various States.

While night crowds jammed the galleries and overflowed into the corridors, the Senate wound up a lengthy wrangle over the theater project by giving voice approval to a proposal of Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York, for preserving all the arts projects on a reduced scale.

The Wagner amendment grants three-quarters of 1 per cent of WPA funds—about $11,000,000—to projects sponsored not by localities, but by the WPA itself. It was understood this sum would be used solely for the various arts projects, including the theater. Last year these projects received over $35,000,000 from the WPA.

A combination of Senators representing a wide variety of political philosophies—including Taft, of Ohio; Pepper, of Florida; Schwellenbach, of Washington; Vandenberg, of Michigan, and Wagner, of New York—helped pass by a thumping majority of 51 to 24 the provision sponsored by Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, limiting the Federal Government too 75 per cent of the total cost of all projects within any one State.

Despite the fact that the President had included no estimate for PWA in his budget message, a strong and determined band of New Dealers and friends of PWA barely failed to add an appropriation for Secretary Ickes' pet agency.

Immediately after Mead's plea for $500,000,000 was turned down, Hayden jumped to his feet with a proposal to cut Mead's figure in half and slash the proportion of Federal funds for PWA projects from the present 45 per cent to 30.

A swtich in the votes of Senators Andrews, Connolly, Hatch, Hill and Russell (Democrats), and Danaher (Republican), raised the affirmative votes from 32 to 38, but the ballot of Senator Davis (Republican), of Pennsylvania, who had not previously voted, brought the negative total also to 38. Vice President Garner, who might have broken the tie, was not in the chair, and the proposal was lost.

However, the Western and Southern friends of the Farm Security Administration easily succeeded—at about 11 p. m.—in boosting its appropriation to a point near the 1939 grant of $175,000,000. Even Majority Leader Barkley supported this amendment, which was introduced by Senator Bankhead (Democrat), of Alabama.

A controversial provision of the bill which struck off the relief rolls workers who had been on WPA 18 months, in favor of those who have been on the certified waiting list for three months, was further modified by a Barkley amendment giving the Administrator discretion in "hardship" cases.

At the insistence of Senator Holt (Democrat), of West Virginia, the Senate approved, 66 to 3, a requirement that WPA make public the names and salaries of all of its employes receiving $1,000 per annum.

As evening turned into night and it became apparent that the bill would not be passed for hours, the attention of some of the Senators began to wander, especially shortly after 9 p. m., when the Louis-Galento fight went on the air.

So many legislators were listening to the radio in the cloak room that when a vote was taken on a proposal of Senator Murray (Democrat), of Montana, to raise the total WPA appropriation to $2,250,000,000, there were hardly more than a dozen Senators in the chamber, with the result that a roll call was not insisted on.

Earlier in the evening, McCarran had attracted considerable attention in the debate on the theater project. Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, attacking the project, had linked it with communism, when McCarran arose and, looking directly at Reynolds, said "What we have to fear is fear itself, inspired by the person who always talks about communism. The trouble is that there are those who forever use the bugbear of communism to scare somebody in order that they themselves may rise."

July 1 to Most, It's New Year's At 3 Bureaus

Today and Tomorrow Feverish as Fiscal Year Nears End

"New Year's Eve" will be celebrated tomorrow with much perspiration at the General Accounting Office, the Treasury and the Bureau of the Budget.

Today and tomorrow are just two ordinary days to most of us but to the desk-bound, figure-juggling officials and journeyman workers of those three agencies those days mark the end of fiscal year 1939 and the beginning of fiscal year 1940, respectively.

And that means a flood of work—balancing books, signing and countersigning appropriation warrants, rushing out claim settlements, answering a deluge of questions by scores of budget officers and performing a myriad other chores, all before midnight tomorrow.

Last night lights burned into the wee, sma' hours in the Government's fiscal offices where "watchdogs" of public moneys already spent or to be spent labored feverishly to have everything in order by "New Year's" on Saturday. It will be the same for the next few days.

Busiest spots are the General Accounting Office, vigilant guardian of all Federal appropriations, and the office of accounts and deposits in the Treasury. Officials of the Budget Bureau said that, while they have their hands full, this season of the year is not as busy as it gets in September, when the departments and independent agencies begin submitting budget estimates for the ensuing year.

The GAO, housed in the old red brick Pension Office Building, is rushing out settlements of claims, counter-signing appropriation warrants transmitted by the Treasury, answering a multitude of inquiries on supply bills still pending on Capitol Hill, adjusting machinery to accommodate changes resulting from the governmental reorganization plans which go into effect Saturday and interpreting various changes in the language of appropriation bills.

"We've got our hands full," is the way one GAO official succinctly put it.

Myrl Smacked Her Right on Lips and She Liked It, Says Bartender in Suit to Get $150,000 Balm From Ruth Etting

By the United Press.

Hollywood, June 28.—A bartender testified today that Myrl Alderman kissed Dorothy Lamour, the sarong actress, and that she liked it.

Counsel for Alderman's wife No. 2, Alma, who is suing Ruth Etting, former blues star and wife No. 3, for $150,000 heart ease, was attempting to show that Alderman was a man of many loves. Mrs. Alma Alderman accused Miss Etting of stealing his affection with gifts and luxury.

He's Met Often

Scene of Alderman's rendezvous with Miss Lamour was the Melrose Grotto, frequented by radio and movie actors. Dignified George L. Roberts, the bartender, had remarked that Dorothy Page, who appeared at a nearby broadcasting station, often waited for Alderman at the Grotto, and added that a lot of women met Alderman.

"I suppose," remarked Mrs. Alderman's attorney casually, "that Dorothy Lamour had come in to get a drink with Alderman on occasion."

"Yes, that is right," Roberts said.

"What's that?" snapped the lawyer, "Do you mean to say Dorothy Lamour got drunk?"

"No!"

"Did you see Alderman embrace Dorothy Lamour?"

"Yes."

"Did Alderman kiss her on the lips?"

"Yes."

"What did she say?"

"She liked it."

Alderman, a pianist and former accompanist for Miss Etting, was married to Alma at the time. Miss Etting's counsel has attempted to show by testimony of Alderman's first wife, that he was not married legally to Alma.

In New York, Miss Lamour, screen beauty, tonight explained that "Mr. Alderman was my pianist and accompanist for over a year in the first days of my radio career. It is possible that in the excitement after one of my early performances I did throw my arms around him, but I do not recall it."

Roosevelt Urged To Appoint Board To Study Housing

The board of directors of the Washington Housing Association yesterday urged the President to name a national commission to study the entire problem of housing, especially for low-income groups.

In a series of resolutions, the board approved amendments now proposed in the Senate which "would enable the United States Housing Authority to continue its work for the coming year." At the same time the board questioned the Housing Authority's interpretation of the act in regard to subsidies and slum reclamation.

The association's proposal calls for a commission of not more than 11 members, who will have until January 1, 1941, to report on its investigations.

Glider Record Doubled By 13,400-Foot Flight

Elmira, N. Y., June 28 (AP).—Lieut. Robert M. Stanley, of the Pensacola Naval Air Station, unofficially doubled the American altitude record for motorless planes today when he rode a turbulent thermal (warm rising air current) 13,400 feet above his point of take-off.

The flight carried him into zero temperatures at 16,400 feet above sea level.

Capital Newsmen to See How They Look in Action

New Capra Film Features Senate Press Gallery; New Acts May Join Bowes Unit Here Tomorrow; This, That and the Other About the Theater

WASHINGTON'S famous Capital correspondents—among the largest and ablest corps of newspaper men to be found anywhere in the world—are about to go to press in Hollywood.

Among the most exciting scenes in Frank Capra's forthcoming Columbia production, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," which costars Jean Arthur and James Stewart, will be the ones to be filmed in the United States Senate press gallery. Columbia is rebuilding the news room in exact detail and the men who cover the National Capital for the world's press will be portrayed by specially selected character actors.

BELL

In the selection of these "types" Mr. Capra is not apt to go far wrong. It will be recalled that he was in Washington for a considerable period several months ago, quietly assembling data for utilization in his new picture. He snooped around the most unexpected places—the cocktail lounges were among the expected—and left the city, one surmises, with a pretty fair notion of what Washington and its political and social life are all about. But he did not stop there.

One of the major coups he negotiated was the engagement of our old friend "Jim" Preston as technical advisor for all of the scenes in the film having to do with Capitol Hill. He could have made no wiser or happier choice. For 35 years James D. Preston was superintendent of the Senate press gallery and in the tumultuous news room scenes in the new picture he probably will appear in his former capacity. He now is one of the high executives of The National Archives.

With Jim Preston virtually bossing this part of the job, it is safe to say that there will be little lacking in the way of realism from the screen depiction of the inside workings of the Press Gallery with its 505 accredited correspondents, representing 324 newspapers, not to mention the three great international news services and a score or more of lesser bureaus and syndicates. Incidentally, Jim has put himself on a bit of a spot. If anything should happen to go wrong with any of these scenes, in the eyes of Washingtonians, particularly—the rest of the country won't know quite so much about it—Mr. Capra will be able to side-step gracefully and put the finger on Jim. Not that he would, but he could.

This "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington," by the way, promises to be quite a picture. In the greatest cast Capra ever has assembled, principal supporting roles will be played by Edward Arnold, Thomas Mitchell, Claude Rains, Guy Kibbee, Eugene Pallette, Beulah Bondi, Harry Carey, H. B. Warner, Grant Mitchell, Ruth Donnelly, Porter Hall and many others, to complete a roster of 168 speaking parts. In some of his more pretentious scenes, Capra is using ensembles that number into the thousands.

Watch your step, Jim!

It is interesting to recall that if Gary Cooper had been available for the title role, "Mr. Smith Goes to Washington" would have borne the title of "Mr. Deeds Goes to Washington" and would have been released as a sequel to "Mr. Deeds Goes to Town," in which Jean Arthur also was the costar. That was not to be, however, and James Stewart was articled for the role Mr. Cooper would have played, if. Since the picture has been in work, Director Capra has expressed himself to the effect that Jimmy Stewart is making just about as good a "Mr. Smith" as Gary Cooper did "Mr. Deeds"—which ought to be plenty good enough.

There may be an addition or two to the cast of Maj. Bowes' "Swing School" stage unit by the time it opens on the stage of Loew's Capitol Theater tomorrow. When Maj. Bowes' coast-to-coast broadcast goes on the air tonight, Managing Director-Producer Gene Ford, of the Capitol, will be listening in with an eager ear. Should any of the new talent strike his fancy, via the rear drum, he will phone the theater's ace salesman of new talent immediately following the broadcast and request that whoever it is be added to the "Swing School" revue. It has worked everywhere else and there is no reason why Mr. Ford shouldn't secure his nominations—if any.

"Katharine and Petruchio," the tabloid arrangement of Shakespeare's "Taming of the Shrew," as played by Edwin Booth, will be given by the Arts Club of Washington in its gardens tonight. The cast will be headed by Yerby Pannill, as Kate, and Herman P. Weiss, as Petruchio. Batista will be played by J. Edmund Veitch, Riondello by Joseph Custer, and Grumio by Clarence E. Ruebsam. Joseph Custer will double in one of the lesser roles and similar versatility will be shown by Theodore Frater and Arthur Rhyn. The Washington Players are staging the piece, under the direction of J. Edmund Veitch, with Kent Dyer as stage manager. The performance is sponsored by the dramatic committee of the Arts Club, Maud Howell Smith, chairman.

For the Saturday and Sunday night cruises of the Potomac Line's S. S. Potomac, Benny Goodman is sending along Teddy Wilson and a Goodman band unit to furnish the music for dancing—or merely for listening, if you do not care to shake a foot. Goodman describes Wilson as "the world's greatest piano player." That seems to be stepping the praise up a little—what with Paderewski, Alexander Brailovski, Arthur Schnabel and a few others still around—but gives rise to the possible question of whether there is some vital difference between a "pianist" and a mere "piano player." However that may be, there they are on the Potomac for two cruises Saturday night and one Sunday night. If you have to know all about the S. S. Potomac's schedule of sailings, that may be found in the midweek notices appearing on the opposite page.

Something was said here yesterday about the impending contest among "Tarzan yellers," to be conducted by Loew's Palace Theater and Station WJSV, with promise of details later. Well, such details as have come to hand are to the effect that on Saturday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock all who think they can yell like Tarzan will be permitted to prove it in front of Loew's Palace Theater. WJSV microphones, presided over by Charles Daly, will carry the Tarzan yells of Washington's synthetic denizens of the forests and jungles to radio audiences far and wide—if they can "take it." This is not altogether a hollow gesture. A considerable array of worthwhile prizes will be awarded the contestants with the lustiest lungs. Take it away.

Speaking of Tarzan, in "Tarzan Finds a Son," opening at the Palace today, the role of the son is played by Johnny Sheffield. At five weeks, so the story goes, Johnny was an incubator baby; at 5 years, he was selected from hundreds of applicants to play the husky, tree-swinging, adopted son of Tarzan in the picture.

A delicate child, he was born in Los Angeles and christened John Matthew Sheffield-Cassan. His acting ability did not have to be manufactured. It was natural. His father, well known on stage and screen, himself was London's leading child actor and was understudied by Noel Coward. His mother is a prominent lecturer. Johnny, on the strength of more than his first name, seems destined to turn out to be another Johnny Weissmuller—with certain reservations.

Why theater managers turn gray: Government pay day comes this week-end, the President has decreed a four-day Fourth of July holiday and the vacation exodus from the Capital probably will be terrific. If enough of the population remain in town to fill the theaters, will they do it? Maybe a little more rain, like yesterday's would answer that one. Otherwise, slim pickin's for the box offices.

Signs of the Times

On an upper Fourteenth street theater marquee: "The Hardys Ride High' also Disney." I have a sneaking idea that Disney got there first.

Awkwardness Paid

Five pretty girls, including leading lady Lucille Ball, were required to learn to dance badly for scenes in "Panama Lady." The players, who are among the best dancers in Hollywood, represent in the picture a chorus in a cheap Central America cabaret.

"GOOD GIRLS GO TO PARIS." Joan Blondell and Melvyn Douglas are reunited in the Earle's comedy of a pretty waitress, determined to win a trip to Paris, and an English professor, teaching at an American university and overcome by Joan's tactics. Walter Conolly, Isabel Jeans, Alan Curtis, Joan Perry and Alexander D'Arcy are in the supporting cast. "Holidays on Parde" is the stage revue and stars Loretta Lee, radio songstress, with George Andrew Martin, novelty entertainer; Fenwicke and Cooke; Don and Betty Lane and the 16 Earle Roxyettes. Opens Friday morning.

"TARZAN FINDS A SON." Johnny Weissmuller returns to his celebrated role of the Ape Man in this continuation of the Edgar Rice Burroughs series. In this episode, Tarzan and his jungle sweetheart find a boy child in a wrecked airplane, the only survivor. Maureen O'Sullivan is brought back to life by popular demand for this new adventure and Johnny Sheffield plays the Tarzan, jr., part, accompanying the Olympic swimmer on his daring trips through the jungle. As a short subject, "Yankee Doodle Goes to Town" dramatizes 150 years of American democracy. Opens this morning.

"FIVE CAME BACK." Nine persons are alive after a plane has crashed in a dangerous jungle and the plane is repaired for rescue. But only five of the nine can be saved and a confessed murderer offers to remain if he is permitted to choose the five who may be saved. This unusual situation is portrayed by Chester Morris, Joseph Calleia, Lucille Ball, Wendy Barrie, John Carradine, Allen Jenkins, C. Aubrey Smith, Kent Taylor, Patric Knowles and Elizabeth Risdon under John Farrow's direction. Opens tomorrow morning.

Capitol

"MAISIE." A blonde bombshell of a chorus girl and a ranch manager begin life anew after he has served a prison term on a framed charge. Ann Southern has the title role and is costarred with Robert Young. Ruth Hussey, Cliff "Ukelele Ike" Edwards and Ian Hunter have other important roles. "Major Bowes' Swing School" is the stage attraction and emphasizes jive and rhythm with a group of 25 of Major Bowes discoveries. Buddy Lewis is master of ceremonies and will introduce the Three Smart Girls, the Four Jitterbugs, Billie Lorraine, Herman Silverman, Jack Murray and the Stuart Sisters. Opens tomorrow morning.

Metropolitan

"JUAREZ." After a record-breaking two weeks at the Earle Theater, this historical drama of democracy in Mexico returns for a third downtown week. Paul Muni plays the great Mexican patriot, who tore his country from the power of Napoleon III, and Bette Davis, Brian Aherne, Claude Rains, John Garfield, Donald Crisp, Joseph Calleia, Gale Sondergaard and Montagu Love are in the cast. Opens tomorrow.

Columbia

"IT'S A WONDERFUL WORLD." Claudette Colbert and James Stewart are brought back in a recent Capitol Theater hit. The smart heroine of "It Happened One Night" is a poetess in this mystery-comedy and gets linked up with a private detective, who is on the spot as a murder suspect. Guy Kibbee, Nat Pendleton, Frances Drake and Ernest Truex are in the cast. Opens tomorrow.

Olney

"TWIN Beds." The perennial laugh favorite opens the second season of this summer professional playhouse at Olney, Md., 20 miles from the city. Film star Helen Twelvetrees is the curtain-raiser's leading lady and the supporting cast includes William Bishop, Dorothy Blackburn, Freddie Sherman, Mabel Paige, Frank McNellis and Jacqueline Brundage. Opens Monday evening and plays through Saturday.

Trans-Lux

THE GOLDEN GATE EXPOSITION, photographed in natural color, is the leading short subject this week at the newsreel house. "Dangerous Mountain Climbing" and "Diving Rhythm" are the two sports features and Walt Disney's Donald Duck appears as "The Hockey Champ." Thirty-five minutes of newsreels complete the bill. Opens tomorrow.

Mount Vernon

"LOVE AFFAIR." The Irene Dunne-Charles Boyer success opens at the drive-in auto theater this evening to run through Saturday, when there will be another of the midnight showings that are now a regular feature of the theater. Robert Donat stars in "The 39 Steps," which plays Sunday through next Wednesday evening.

Glen Echo

THE AMUSEMENT PARK is preparing for record-breaking crowds over the holiday week-end, with the swimming pool and the picnic grounds as strong magnets for the holiday makers. Lang Thompson and his orchestra yield the ballroom to Little Joe Hart on Monday, who returns as a result of his popularity last season.

Wilson Line

THE CITY OF WASHINGTON, the Wilson Line's steamer, sails daily at 10 a. m. and 2 p. m. for Mount Vernon and makes a "sunset cruise" at 5:30 each afternoon and a "moonlight cruise" every evening at 8:30 from its Seventh street wharf. "Kiddies' Days," on this excursion steamer, are every Monday and Friday, with two trips daily to Marshall Hall Park at half fare.

Cross Roads

"BIOGRAPHY" opens at the Virginia barn theater next Monday evening, with Izetta Jewell, jr., in the leading role. "Candlelight" continues its two-week engagement through this Saturday night, with Austin Gattis, Charles Grunwell, Doris Edwards and Marjorie Harrison heading the cast.

Louella O. Parsons

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, June 28.—Sigird Gurie, the Brooklyn-born Norwegian, whose career as a Goldwyn star was brief, sweeps right into the Danielle Darrieux roles just like that. She finished "Forgotten Women" for Universal and must have pleased Nate Blumberg and the big boys on the "U" lot, for she was given a new ticket and "Rio," originally intended for the wandering French gal.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I suppose there is an end to all patience and Universal is getting a little weary of waiting for Mlle. Danielle. They will give the Gurie a good cast and a chance to see if the American public will take her to their hearts as they did La Darrieux. Basil Rathbone, Victor McLaglen, Leo Carillo and Robert Cummings all check in at the studio July 3 with Sigrid for "Rio," with John Brahm directing.

Esmerelda came right along to America with "The Hunchback of Notre Dame"—Charles Laughton. She is Maureen O'Hara, his leading lady in "Jamaica Inn" and Charlie's personal protege. Not surprising that Ginger Rogers, who at one time discussed Esmerelda with Pandrg Berman—even to having a wig made for a test, has decided against playing a dramatic part right now. Her "Bachelor Mother" was such a riot, the town is talking of nothing else, so why leave smart, snappy comedy for heavy drama? Eddie O'Brien, who has been publicized as Nancy Kelly's boy friend, gets the Douglas Fairbanks, jr., role, with Thomas Mitchell, Walter Hampden, Harry Davenport and Joyce Gardner completing the cast. Sh! don't say I told, but Joyce Gardner is the well-known socialite, Helen Fortescue Reynolds!

Jimmy Roosevelt has made good with Sam Goldwyn, so just like any other Hollywood employe, he's had his option lifted. Today he completed six months as vice president of the Goldwyn Company. Having learned the first steps of this intricate business, he will now pay more attention to the production end. He's probably the only Hollywood hired hand who has dined at Buckingham Palace with the King and Queen, picnicked with them on frankfurters and presented a picture of sartorial elegance at the British Embassy garden party. One nice thing about Jimmy, however, is his sense of humor and the fact that he's not a bit impressed with being a President's son.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Hedy LaMarr has her first Hollywood sunburn and it's very becoming; Dorothy Lamour will be asked point-blank by Paramount if the reconciliation rumor with Herbie Kaye is true, when she planes in Saturday. She even said she would give up her career. That pretty girl with Charlie Lederer looked very much like Joyce Mathews. If so, where was her erstwhile heartbeat, Arnold Kunody? Errol Flynn is out again, wearing a patch as a memento of his accident. He sails his boat to Catalina Saturday, to be among those present at the opening of the new La Conga; Lynn Howard and Rita Johnson dining tete-a-tete at the house of Murphy. He leaves Thursday to take the Binglin stable to Boston; Ben Lyon has been asked by Harold Lloyd to pitch one of the innings at the comedians versus leading men baseball game, July 25.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

The New Yorker

By Leonard Lyons

New York, June 28.

THE MARQUIS OF DONEGAL, the London columnist, was one of the newspaper men who toured recently with the King and Queen . . . Donegal, very much affected by this contact with royalty, met Tallulah Bankhead and very haughtily told the daughter of the Speaker of the House of Representatives: "Tallulah, I thought your Daddy behaved quite well when he met the King and Queen" . . . "Really?" Tallulah snapped. "Daddy said the King and Queen behaved quite well, too.'

ONE YEAR AGO the front pages reported that Dorothy Lamour and her husband were planning to have a baby a year from then. In the meantime, however, Miss Lamour and her husband have been divorced. But when Dorothy returns to Hollywood shortly she'll adopt a baby . . . John Montague, the mystery-man golfer, arrived here and will participate in local golf tournaments . . . Franklin D. Roosevelt, jr., now receives mail in care of the Stork Club . . . The City of San Francisco, fighting the New York City competition, hired Benny Goodman to bring his orchestra to the Golden Gate Exposition for a four-week engagement.

FRANKLYN HUTTON, father of Barbara Hutton Haugwitz-Reventlow, decided to spend the summer roughing it at a dude ranch in Cody, Wyo. . . . He likes roughing it that way except for one unbearable discomfort—the fact that he cannot eat his morning melon unless he has Parma Ham with it . . . He wrote to New York and made the arrangements. And so now Franklyn Hutton is "roughing it," with melon and Parma Ham—supplied by the swanky Colony Restaurant in New York.

MAYOR LAGUARDIA will become an honorary member of the Musicians Union and will receive a solid-gold card attesting to his membership . . . The mayor, incidentally, will have a primary fight when he backs Commissioner Herlands for the Republican nomination for district attorney in Brooklyn. Ten leaders there refuse to heed any of LaGuardia's recommendations . . . Fritz Kortner is working with Pearl Buck on her new play . . . Civil Service Commissioner Paul Kern is assisting the City of Toronto in installing a Civil Service system similar to New York's.

LAST YEAR Robert Ardrey's play, "How to Get Tough About It," was produced by Guthrie McClintic. McClintic then assigned him to write a play for Katharine Cornell, who is Mrs. McClintic . . . Ardrey retired to the country, wrote his new play, and then showed it to the producer . . . McClintic suggested some revisions, and so Ardrey again retired to the country, rewrote his script, then rewrote it again—and now has an excellent play . . . One factor, however, is very disturbing. In rewriting and improving it, he had to reduce—and then further reduce—the lines assigned to Katharine Cornell . . . until her role was completely eliminated.

A PROMINENT INDIAN revolutionary who is aligned with the Gandhi movement has been living in New York for many months . . . When he learned that Their Majesties would visit this town, he prepared for all emergencies . . . To provide himself with a perfect alibi, in the event of any tragedy befalling the visiting rulers, the Indian went to Baltimore and stayed there while Their Majesties were in New York. From Baltimore he addressed 20 letters to all his friends—letters post-marked "Baltimore," and stamped with the all-important date of Their Majesties' New York visit.

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Calif., June 28.—Guess where the first movie was made? And where the original "queen" still lives? If Jack Benny wasn't so modest he would have told Fred Allen. When "Man about Town" was premiered Sunday in Waukegan, we learned all about it.

HOPPER

In 1898, Waukegan's inventor Edward H. Amet had perfected a camera and needed someone to try it out on. So little-girl-next-door volunteered and brought her girl friend Margaret Spoor, to watch. Amet conceived the idea of both girls "acting" and so we had our first movie, "The Lady Boxer." It ran three minutes on the screen and was shown in over 700 opera houses. The leading lady got hundreds of proposals and demands for photographs.

Then Margaret's father, George K. Spoor, and Amet got together, formed the first picture company Taking first letter of each man's name—"S" and "A," and formed Essanay Company. Later Chaplin, Wally Beery and Gloria Swanson were its stars.

What a kick Mrs. Bess Bower Dunn, original movie queen, got meeting new crop of Hollywood stars.

Fay (Mother Hardy) Holden celebrates her silver wedding anniversary with her own husband—not with Judge Hardy.

Mickey Rooney's had a terrific itch to meet Garbo. He was literally in heaven when he got a note saying she understood he did a fine impersonation of her, she'd like to see it. He tore over to her set, only to learn that one of the boys on his set had faked the letter.

Freddie Bartholomew will address 100,000 Boy Scouts at the San Francisco World's Fair August 3 and is writing speech himself.

The French picture, "Entente Cordiale," is getting greater raves than most of our own epics. Metro owns it and can't find anyone in America to duplicate the Frenchman's performance. He, poor lad, can't speak a word of English. But why not let us see it as it is.

While you're all raving about "Grapes of Wrath" wonder if you've read John Steinbeck's best story, "To a God Unknown?" Believe it was his second novel.

Dave Selznick wanted some lazy colored folk for his Georgia street scenes, so had a group wait at the casting office four hours! The ones who loafed best got the jobs!

Judy Garland has a body conditioner, a former Olympic swimming champion.

'South Riding,' Yorkshire Film Opens at Little

Ralph Richardson and Edna Best Featured In Unique Story

"SOUTH RIDING." Alexander Korda picturization of a novel by Winifred Holtby, adapted to the screen by Ian Dalrymple, with Ralph Richardson, Edna Best, Edmund Gwenn, Maria Lohr, Ann Todd, John Clements, Edward Lexy, Josephine Wilson, Joan Ellam, Gus McNaughton, Glynis Johns, Herbert Lomas, Poppy Novak and Lewis Casson. Directed by Victor Saville. Previewed Monday, June 26. At the Little Theater.

As British as Yorkshire pudding—and quite as unique—is the Little Theater's new first-run film, "South Riding."

A riding is a third part of a county and as Yorkshire is England's largest county, its three ridings are powerful and almost politically independent; it is the people who live under this government, who make and are affected by its laws, with which "South Riding" is concerned. In Yorkshire there are actually the North, East and West Ridings, so the late Winifred Holtby, who wrote the novel from which this film is adapted, made her setting typical, but not specific, by calling it South Riding.

Since the core of "South Riding" is essentially complex, Director Victor Saville's problem was to include as many views of the whole panorama as possible, without confusion. He succeeds by making us feel as deeply for the poor scholarship girl of the riding as we do for the land-owner whose ancestral estate is crashing into debt.

Mixed County Council

On the county council are all classes of people, with varying personal interests. There is the earnest young reformer, a socialist, fighting for rehousing; the well-to-do lady, who serves from the joy of helping the less fortunate; the contractor, who is out for his financial gain alone; the weak go-between, who is a political foil for someone smarter than he, and the landed squire, whose estate and family are falling into ruin.

The private troubles of these public officers are largely focused on the squire. He remains faithful to an insane wife, but finds companionship in the young headmistress of the county school. She has rescued his young daughter from terrible loneliness and supports him in his fight against a crooked housing bill, forced through the council by an unscrupulous business man, posing as a friend to the young idealist.

All the facets of this story must be considered in the finished work, for the complexity of relationships in this everyday setting is the pith of the film. A leisurely pace is deliberately sustained throughout by Director Saville and his result is a more tightly-knit film than such a complex story might indicate. The ending, a happy one, is somewhat too pat, but any ending to such a story is naturally an arbitrary one.

Story Is Well Cast

The cast is so well adapted to the human quality of the film that it seems as though everyday Yorkshire folk are playing the roles. Ralph Richardson, mostly recently seen in "The Citadel," is the squire and Edna Best, the understanding school mistress of "Prison Without Bars," has a similar role in this Korda production. Edmund Gwenn is the dupe of the brainy contractor and Maria Lohr, the popular comedienne of the London stage, is the benevolent councilwoman.

Authentic settings in the great northern shire contribute invaluable local color to this film, which is not everyone's picture, but one which those who really wish to understand "The Little Island" will find deeply interesting.

Roadside

"STILL WATERS RUN DEEP," Tom Taylor's comedy of a mild husband who proved a pillar of strength in time of need, continues at the Rockville Pike Barn Theater. This drama of the 1850s is under the direction of Ralph Fowler, and its local players include George Farrington, Anne Ives, Charles Corker, Lansing Hall, Maccubbin Waters and Larry Lawrence.

Scoop! Scoop! Scoop!

Frayed nerves of news editors and reporters, long irritated by hearing that traditional newspaper phrase battered about on the screen like a tennis ball, get a break at last.

In fact, the script for Hollywood's latest drama of the editorial rooms, "They Asked for It," has eliminated the overworked phrase entirely.

The director of the film, Frank McDonald, who did many of the "Torchy Blane" stories, is responsible.

He has posted an ironclad rule on the set that at no time in the story shall Michael Whalen, Joy Hodges, William Lundigan or Isabel Jewell use the words "scoop," "chief" or "hold the presses."

With the full approval of Associate Producer Max Golden, McDonald is determined that "They Asked for It" shall mark the occasion in which newspaper men and women are shown on the screen as normal, well-balanced human beings.

Helen Vinson in 'Memory of Love'

Absent from the American screen for more than a year, Helen Vinson, one of Hollywood's most popular actresses, will return this month to play an important part in "Memory of Love," co-starring Carole Lombard, Cary Grant and Kay Francis.

Charles Coburn, currently supporting Ginger Rogers and David Niven in "Little Mother," and Katharine Alexander, who recently played opposite John Barrymore in "The Great Man Votes," also will be in the new film.

Placing The Blame

According to a report, Jesse H. Jones, chairman of the RFC, thinks it may be possible to lend $500,000,000 to Central and South American countries without seeking express Congressional authorization. The Export-Import Bank, he says, could obtain funds for the purpose from the RFC, which in turn would sell its own obligations in the open market.

This expression of opinion has stirred Senator Borah to the depths. Prior to confirmation of Mr. Jones as Federal loan administrator he asserted that such views, if correctly reported, should disqualify the RFC head from holding any office under the Government. This appears to be a most illogical conclusion in view of the fact that Mr. Jones was only stating what he believed to be permissible under the law governing the operations of the RFC and its satellite—the Export-Import Bank.

If Congress disapproves of huge loans to Latin-American countries, the remedy lies in passage of legislation to prohibit such advances. It cannot shift responsibility for its own careless bestowal of discretionary power upon administrative officials—by blaming them for exercising conferred authority.

Of course no Government lending agency ought to be in a position to carry out grandiose plans for investing half a billion dollars of public money in Latin-American capital enterprises. And the time to prevent its doing so is now, not later, when the country may have been irrevocably committed to a course of conduct.

Congress has already passively permitted the Export-Import Bank to engage in a type of political lending, the wisdom of which is extremely dubious. However, if it does not like the results it has only itself to blame. The character of the bank's operations is a matter of record. Its operations have been carried on in a legal manner. Congress has not made any move to confine its operations to the commercial field and only recently extended the life of the bank. Hence if Senator Borah wants to be strictly fair, he will turn his attention to the shortcomings of his colleagues instead of making a Government official, subject to Congressional control, the target of criticism.

Waiving The Rules

The guide books tell us that the British are a phlegmatic and slow-moving race. The guide books are out of date. By way of proof there is the revealing case of the British Junior Car Club which recently began what the members call a good will tour of the United States.

There is nothing particularly phlegmatic or slow about these enthusiastic British motorists. The first time they got out on an open road they stepped on the gas with a vengeance and it took the best efforts of the New Jersey police to overtake them. Those caught—15 cars in all—were traveling almost 90 miles an hour. The three cars that got away were going even faster. In their case the Jersey police could not obey the old injunction of handing out no tickets until they could see the white of the eyes. The best they could do was to catch a fleeting glimpse of the tail lights.

In England, the bringers of good will explained, the only speed limit is one of 30 miles an hour to be observed in towns. As they were given a motorcycle police escort through New York, at a reputed 60 miles an hour, it is not surprising that the British figured 90 would be a moderate speed in the wide open spaces.

In addition to the good will, the travelers brought with them a booklet translating some of our more picturesque colloquialisms into the King's English. The book explains, for instance, that a "flat" in America is a tired tire, not a place to retire. And a "subway" is not an underhand method, but just a New Yorker's term for an "underground."

Luckily appeasement worked at Princeton, and the English visitors continued on their way after receiving what they called a scolding, which incidentally is English for a "bawling out." Judging from similar experiences, it is safe to say that they probably noted a few more expressions that need looking into. But at least one of them wasn't "jug," which, over here, for their future information, is a container of another sort.

Imaginary Disasters

The President's lively imagination has conjured up quite a number of fictitious disasters which, according to his predictions, would result from the refusal of Congress to prolong his power to devalue the dollar.

He asserts that it would turn back control over foreign exchange to Wall Street and would mean a "veritable holiday" for international exchange speculators. Furthermore, he fears that our foreign trade position would be weakened and our national defenses consequently undermined. A most convincing refutation of these extravagant assumptions is afforded by the lethargic movement of the exchanges following the Senate vote of last Monday.

The chastened habitues of Wall Street will probably be somewhat grimly amused to learn that they possess great potential powers to spread ruin at home and abroad by manipulating the exchange value of the dollar. As a matter of fact, the power to devalue does not prevent speculation in foreign exchange, which can be carried on, regardless of whether the President retains or loses the right to alter the gold value of the dollar.

Speculative operations have, however, been made much more difficult and hazardous by the existence of the Treasury's $2,000,000,000 stabilization fund. That undoubtedly will continue to function indefinitely, as there is no Congressional opposition to it. It is this fund, employed to control exchange fluctuations, which really scares speculators away, not the remote possibility that a change in the gold value of the dollar may be decreed. Indeed, the President himself says that the chances are ten to one against his exercising the right to devalue.

Retention by the President of the right to devalue might, it is true, have a salutary deterrent effect upon nations contemplating depreciation of their currencies as a means of gaining trade advantages in foreign markets. However, the power to devalue is not the sole emergency weapon in the hands of the Administration. The Treasury is permitted under permanent legislation to buy and sell gold at varying rates, "most advantageous to the public interest." That would enable the President to bring about an effective depreciation of the exchange value of the dollar without resort to formal devaluation.

So far as the immediate situation is concerned, withdrawal of the right to devalue instead of encouraging speculation would tend to discourage it by removing an element of uncertainty regarding the future value of the dollar. Recurrent rumors that the President might resort to devaluation have frequently had an unsettling effect upon exchange markets, thus creating conditions favorable to speculative activity.

It would be a mistake to regard the President's outburst as a serious attempt to appraise the financial effects of discounting his power to devalue the dollar. His remarks are chiefly significant because they reveal his profound irritation with the recalcitrant Democratic Senators who voted for withdrawal of one of his cherished emergency powers.

Such action must seem very like treason to one of the President's temperament. The final vote on the devaluation proposal will, therefore, rightly be regarded as a test of the President's political hold over Congress rather than an expression of support or disapproval for a monetary policy long ago discredited in the public mind as a device for restoring prosperity.

Neglected Opportunity

The troubles of the building industry were brought pointedly to public attention by the testimony of Isador Lubin, Commissioner of Labor Statistics, before the Temporary National Economics Committee. In spite of the aid given it from various sources by the Roosevelt Administration, the business of constructing homes for the people is still in the doldrums in most parts of the country. Merely to maintain existing standards of housing, Mr. Lubin pointed out, the industry ought to be building 200,000 more dwelling units annually than it constructed last year.

No investigator is in doubt as to the cause of this continued lag in construction. Everywhere it is obvious that high building costs are crippling the industry. A vast number of people need new houses and would buy or rent them if modern accommodations could be provided at lower prices. But, as Mr. Lubin points out, the vast majority of new houses are still sold or rented at prices which most families cannot afford to pay.

This fact gives special significance to the fight planned by the Antitrust Division of the Department of Justice against monopoly in the building industry. Efforts to choke off competition and to fix artificial prices for building supplies have been widespread. All too often manufacturers in this field have attempted to cope with depression by increasing their profits on a smaller volume of business. But the consequence of this short-sighted policy is to make genuine recovery in the industry more and more difficult.

Efforts of the Antitrust Division to end collusive practices in this field are certainly a step in the right direction. It should not be supposed, however, this drive alone will give us a modernized building industry. Indeed, one major reason for the high cost of residential building is the prevalence of small and inefficient operators in this field. That weakness will not be overcome by prosecutions under the antitrust laws.

Some more positive action is obviously needed. The Administration made a good start toward revival of home building when it created the FHA. Thanks to its efforts, funds for residential construction can be obtained on terms far more reasonable than those prevailing a few years ago. But financing is only one element in the cost of acquiring a dwelling. So long as building material prices and labor costs remain excessive, the housing business is not likely to flourish.

If the TNEC can devise a way to free the industry from these weights around its neck and to encourage home construction on a mass-production basis, it will render the country an invaluable service. It is not a question of asking sacrifices from dealers and manufacturers of building supplies and from building trade unions. Rather it is a question of asking them to co-operate in promotion of their own welfare.

A healthy building industry would provide a vast number of jobs and enormous new opportunities for the suppliers of materials. It is a serious reflection upon the ingenuity of American business and labor that this potential source of reasonable profits and extensive employment has been so long subjected to short-sighted exploitation.

Retreat At Tientsin

The acceptance by Japan of the British offer to negotiate the Tientsin dispute should bring about at least a temporary easing of what was a highly dangerous situation. In the present disturbed state of the world, this is all to the good.

It is much too early to assume, however, that this welcome show of moderation by the Tokyo government represents more than a tactical retreat from an extreme position. No doubt, the Japanese were impressed by the way the British held their ground despite intolerable pressure. Nor could the Tokyo authorities leave out of account the possibility that Great Britain might, despite the critical European situation, be goaded into taking reprisals that might damage Japan's already seriously straitened economy. And that possibility was all the more real in view of Japan's failure to drive a wedge between Great Britain and France, on the one hand, and the United States on the other.

But if Japan is willing to relax or abandon the blockade of the British and French concessions at Tientsin, there is no indication that she has any intention of abandoning her plan of ultimately taking over the foreign concessions and settlements in China. All that her decision to negotiate with Great Britain may mean is that at this juncture she is content to take a large bite out of the concession cherry rather than swallowing it whole.

It is important to remember that the ostensible motive for the blockade was the refusal of the British authorities at Tientsin to turn over to the Japanese four Chinese accused of having murdered an official of the Tientsin puppet government. Since then, however, the Japanese have broadened their demands to include far-reaching changes in British policy in China.

For instance, they have insisted that the British "cooperate" with them in suppressing anti-Japanese activities in the Tientsin concession, and that Great Britain withdraw the support she has been giving to Chinese exchange. It has irked the Japanese that their efforts to introduce into North China currency sponsored by them have failed. They blame the British for this failure and they insist that the freedom which the foreign concessions have enjoyed as areas of free exchange is responsible for the fact that the Japanese-supported currency is being quoted in these areas at a discount. Should the British agree to change their course in this and other particulars, Japan would have reason to be well satisfied with the results of the 15-day blockade at Tientsin. Nor can Great Britain be blamed if, at this juncture, she decides to give way, at least partially, to Japanese demands.

Storm clouds are again beginning to roll over the European horizon. Great Britain desperately needs to have her hands untied in Asia so as to be free to act nearer home. Provided that Japan's price is not set at too high a figure, there is a strong likelihood that it will be met.

The Nonstop Era

From the Christian Science Monitor.

A recent regulation in Paris decreed that the buses there must stop only by request, and not merely as a matter of routine, at the recognized places. The effort to speed up public conveyances is a constant one in most cities, and one wonders if the bus will eventually form a trio with time and tide and wait for no man. Possibly the more athletic members of the public at least, who, as it is, like to get their buses on the run, may be provided with parallels to stopping places in "crawling" places; or eventually, as one light-hearted comment from Paris suggests, passengers may be caught up and dropped from a moving bus as mail bags are sometimes transferred to trains.

Price Of Milk

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: We in the Town of Occoquan take great interest in the milk investigation now taking place in Washington, D. C., principally because we pay 14 cents a quart for milk here in the sticks in Virginia.

If the milk inspections and regulations in Washington, D. C., are so good, why is the tuberculosis rate the third highest in the entire United States? We are regulated almost entirely by the United States Public Health rating here and statistics give us a better bill of health than in the District of Columbia.

If, as the Milk Control Board claims, there is sufficient milk in the Maryland-Virginia milk shed without having to bring milk in from other States, why is the price not reduced? It seems the principal reason for allowing milk from other States to enter the District market is in order to reduce the price to the consumers. Why then is the price not reduced?

I would like you to publish this in The Post so all will know we are in the same predicament here with regard to the price of milk as they are in Washington, D. C.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Why all the hubbub about the Washington milk situation? Why not do something about the bottles? The public want lower-priced milk, not inferior-quality milk. To me the bottles seem to be the way out. Why not permit the consumer to return the bottle or pay for it over the counter when the purchase is made?

If the bottle costs 4 or 5 cents, then it is very easily understood why the milk is retailed to the consumer at 4 or 5 cents above what he should pay for it. It is my honest opinion that if the adjustment were made as above described the demand for milk would be greatly increased.

Sufficient Punishment

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I refer to the series of articles you are running, by Howard F. Wentworth, about reckless drivers going unpunished.

Your writer feels that the persons involved in accidents are not all punished by being brought before a judge and sentenced. He is all wrong in his theory. As he says, a good many of the cases are settled out of court, and that is a proper procedure, for the wrongdoer is punished thereby, being obliged to pay for the damages.

In that manner a punishment is inflicted, and the taxpayers are saved the expense of a trial. You must remember there is a great difference between being negligent and being reckless.

Therefore, since our courts provided a method of adjusting civil damages, it is not necessary to have a criminal prosecution also. The way to prevent accidents is by educating people, and not by putting them in jail. Too many people have the idea that every accident involves a criminal offense, but they are wrong.

So long as the one responsible for the accident is obliged to pay for the damages, even by adjustment with the other party, a punishment and a lesson is inflicted upon the wrongdoer, and he thereby is more careful in the future.

What To Tax

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Ridicule is a powerful weapon, and it is being used with frequent mention of impossible payments to the veterans of life. However, the theory that pensions are necessary has been generally accepted. The question is how much, and how to get the money.

It is easy to see that in a matter of such fundamental importance the financial part must necessarily be linked up with the general and collective values that are due to population. What to tax is the first thought, and as business is the thing we always tax, it means that extra death-dealing loads are to be piled on the back of industry and initiative.

Henry George predicted that we would come to the present condition in a slough of defeatism and degradation. Pensions at 60 will prove to be a natural step along the road of democracy if it teaches us that the endowment of the veterans of life must come out of "land values" and not from industry.

England Our Friend

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: To the average American citizen it must be disheartening to see Senators, who are supposed to have the best interests of the country at heart, trying to hamstring the efforts of the Administration to assert the position of the United States in world affairs and to preserve peace among the nations.

England has been the friend of the United States for more than a century and is perhaps the only nation that would come to our assistance should we be attacked by another power.

She showed her friendship for America during the Spanish-American War by notifying the nations of Europe that she would be on our side should any other nation take sides. Again during the dispute with Japan the early part of the present century, over the California exclusion act, when Japan wrote insultingly to our State Department and sought to make it "casus belli," Lord Grey, then Prime Minister of England, notified Japan that in the event of war with the United States she, England, would not be neutral but be on America's side.

Aside from these evidences of friendship, anyone who knows anything about the situation or the condition of world affairs knows that, but for the friendship of England and the strength of the British navy, our Monroe Doctrine, that has acted as a deterrent against foreign invasion of the Western Hemisphere, would be as worthless as the paper it is written on and we would have long since been at the mercy of certain European powers. With the British navy destroyed and England conquered, we would have to fight our battles alone, and I hesitate to contemplate the consequences, even though we escaped with our sovereignty.

God grant that the members of the Senate come to their senses and not commit the horrible mistake made by their predecessors at the end of the war when they refused to assume their responsibility and join the League of Nations to promote the peace of the world. Wilson predicted in one of his last addresses that failure to do so would "break the heart of the world." It seems that his prophecy has come true.

I commend the stand taken by The Washington Post in its recent editorials in regard to this subject.

Productive Foreign Loans Lauded

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your editorial in The Post of June 26 entitled "Why Foreign Loans?" you state that "$500,000,000 advanced to foreigners would provide a much slighter stimulus to our industries by way of increased exports than the same sum spent directly on domestic projects."

May I point out that this is not necessarily the case, but depends primarily upon the character of the loan and the character of the domestic project. A loan to a South American government, for example, to develop the production of manganese would have a recurring effect upon our economy.

1. It would give employment to American machinists and tool workers in providing the excavating, pumping, lighting, air-conditioning and refining machinery.

2. Dollars borrowed by the foreign government to pay foreign labor could only be spent in the United States either in other purchases unrelated to the mining project or to liquidate blocked balances due exporters for shipments already made.

3. American railroad men, truck drivers, longshoremen, freight forwarders, bank clerks, seamen and others would all be paid from the loan in moving the equipment for the mine and the other extraneous exports to the American seaboard and overseas to the South American country.

4. The manganese when mined would find a ready market in this country because we produce only 5 per cent of our needs of this essential metal for the steel industry and import 95 per cent.

5. The importation of the manganese produced under the loan would provide the South American country with more dollars which could only be spent in the United States for a variety of our exports all of which would recurringly benefit us as long as the foreign manganese were produced and imported under items 1, 2 and 3.

6. Thus $100,000,000 invested in a South American manganese mine might eventually result in $1,000,000,000 in employment of American labor. Now contrast this with $100,000,000 spent on a pump-priming project at home. If it is used to build a park, a bridge or just to rake leaves, once the money is spent by the Government it has provided all the employment to labor it will ever provide. Unless the bridge is a toll bridge or the road a toll road there is no possibility of any monetary return. Even a toll bridge or toll road provides only small recurring employment in upkeep. Most of the earnings go toward amortization.

Now let us suppose that the $100,000,000 invested in the South American manganese mine is never repaid as to principal. It has still given $1,000,000,000 stimulus to our industries. Even though the $100,000,000 expended in pump-priming is fully amortized and returned to the Treasury, it has at best provided only a tenth as much employment.

The difference comes in the character of the loan. A foreign production loan is far more valuable as a stimulus to American industry and employment than a domestic unproductive project. Unfortunately our previous loans to South America were, in the main, merely pump-priming projects abroad which we financed. What the President now proposes are productive foreign loans, and as employment-increasing devices for American labor, such loans cannot be better justified.

The Post Impressionist

The Androphobic Jitters

AS A VETERAN of waiting rooms in hairdressing salons and dentists' offices, I'm impressed by a new kind of literature currently being offered the clientele of such places. Gone forever, evidently, are the days when quips from "Judge," articles on the home beautiful, or stories about the swimming pools in movieland helped one innocently pass the time while waiting to be beautified or have one's inlays attended to. Instead, pocket-sized magazines bearing such alluring titles as "Your Personality," "You," "Your Life," and "Popular Guide to Desirable Living" invite one to orgies of soul searching which, at conclusion, make it seem more than likely that one's next bout of waiting will take place in the anteroom to a psychoanalyst's office.

Having sprung up, no doubt, in the wake of Mr. Dale Carnegie's classic, this new type of literary output is devoted to analyzing and improving the personality. "Are You a Wallflower?" and "What Is YOUR Booze Trouble?" are typical titles of articles.

Just as a perusal of medical tomes is apt to give one all the symptoms of housemaid's knee or still nastier diseases, so a steady diet of these magazines will convince the reader that he or she is a border-line case. A half hour with an article on complexes in the June issue of "Your Life" left me positive that I'm an "androphobe" (hater of the other sex, owing to father-love frustration). To get my mind on something cheerier, I turned quickly to a piece headed "Liquor as a Substitute for Love," which only made me suspicious of myself and of all my friends who habitually take more than two cocktails.

Equally depressing are the quizzes by which editors are currently helping you find out the truth about yourself. A series of ink blobs in one of the glamour magazines, for instance, is supposed to suggest, according to whether the masculine or the feminine predominates in your nature (a) an orchid (b) lace (c) a monkey wrench.

Then you are asked whether, if you were a working girl engaged to be married, and your fiance's salary was suddenly reduced to half yours, through no fault of his own, you would break the engagement, get married and keep your job, or renounce your position and live on his income. I eagerly tabulate results, only to discover that I'm that dreariest of creatures, a hundred per cent masculine woman. Even my dentist, a former star fullback and eminently virile type, does not wholly comfort me when he assures me that he took the quizz, too, and came out feminine.

All in one morning I learn, via the magazines, that besides being masculine and an "androphobe," I am frustrated, untidy, timid, bold, treacherous, nervous, weak-willed, egotistical, self-centered, a social climber, and unattractive to men. This last would seem to be the greatest of all failings, for most of the self-improvement magazines concentrate on making you popular with the other sex.

Yet no two articles agree on the correct formula for becoming une femme fatale. One author advises you to cultivate hobbies, mostly, it seems, as a sort of conversational ice-breaker. He maintains that if suddenly confronted with a dream man, you have only to chirp cheerily, "I'm taking up basket weaving" for him to recognize you instantly as his woman.

Yet in the June issue of "Your Life," Kathleen Norris comes out flatly against hobbies, warning that they bore men. If you must go in for them, she says, be sure you've snared your beau before letting him know you're a hobby addict, and then break it to him very gently.

One charm authority stresses careful grooming, saying that therein lies the secret of sex appeal. Just as I've nervously resolved to do something about my cuticle, I turn to an interview in "Screenland" with Virginia Bruce. Miss Bruce's advice to the women of the world runs exactly counter. She stands pat on the statement that during courtship days she was careful to let her future husband see her as often as possible with an unpowdered nose, so that he wouldn't be glamorized into marriage.

It's so very difficult to know what to do. Can I just be myself, as one author advises, or should I use finesse, like Mme. Recamier, and please another writer? Is it better to be the glamorous soignee type of female or the hearty, wind-blown kind? Or am I too afflicted with androphobia ever to appeal to anybody? I'd be pretty downcast about myself if a glance at prospectus of the July issue of "Your Life" didn't assure me that then I will be told how not to be lonely, how to make good before 40 and to be a good little gullible.

DUDLEY HARMON.

MacLeish Nomination

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: David R. Wahl, writing to your paper in defense of Archibald MacLeish, seem to desire a radical propagandist as head of "our national library" to be attached to the Communist Front. His lip-service to "the preservation of democracy" is not impressive in the light of his indignation against the views of Dr. Milton J. Ferguson, president of the American Library Association, concerning "organization of library employes." The Nation has grown familiar with that variety of hypocrisy. It no longer is deceived by pretended devotion to freedom when the speaker plainly is motivated by class hatred.

But Mr. Wahl is as powerless as I am to decide the present issue. The entire American Library Association, in convention assembled, asked President Roosevelt to appoint a professional librarian. He declined. The Senate now must accept or reject the nominee, and nothing much can be done by plain citizens—until 1941. Meanwhile, Mr. MacLeish may occupy the chair of Dr. Herbert Putnam without replacing him. The library and its personnel, of course, will suffer during the interim. Eventually, however, the inevitable reaction is sure to bring relief.

Fair Enough

'Balkan' States

STATE RIGHTS never have meant much to me so far as I have been aware, except during the time of prohibition, when I felt that such States as Ohio and Indiana and those of the Southern tier had no right to impose their religious convictions on us of New York. The old arguments on that issue were rather silly and insincere, because I didn't really feel that I was a citizen of any particular State but a citizen of the United States, and even today I couldn't identify the State flag of New York, if we have one, unless the name appears on it. In that case I might spell it out. Moreover, people used to tell me that if it came down to a question of that, why New York State as a whole, including up-State, was dry, too.

I feel even less devoted to State rights now that they are engaged in a nasty and mutually destructive competition to fleece the Federal Treasury, each at the expense of all the others and the devil take the hindmost, as though the Federal Government were something extra rather than the sum of all 48.

Interstate Tariff Walls Are Erected

THEY ARE TRYING to penalize one another directly, too, in highway tolls and goods inspection, and in three cases, none very recent—Florida, Colorado and California—have had the nerve to establish immigration restrictions based solely on the poverty of native American economic crippies limping around to catch a few days' work harvesting the squat crops or toting golf balls or shooting biscuits in the restaurants of the resorts. They crack down on chain stores, which are owned by Americans, and one State won't admit another State's herrings to compete with its own, with the result that the other State says, "all right, we will slap a prohibitive tax on your watermelons."

Some people profess to think that this can be unscrambled, but that I doubt, because all such restrictions and dealers' licenses, the latter having the effect of customs duties, were lobbied through the Legislatures by the homers and will be surrendered only a bit at a time in the face of retaliation. The tendency is to tax and restrict in anger, as though the industry and people of one State were actually enemies or, anyway, foreigners. This is a situation in which the Federal Government isn't invading States' rights at all. They are knifing one another, and the Government, if it should interfere, would do so only in the interests of them all to prevent something which Judge K. M. Landis, in his one-gallus moods, refers to as a grand old Saturday night gut-letting.

'Balkanization' Process Is Seen

IF FLORIDA can bar a Hoosier, toiling down No. 1 in his flivver with the wife and kids to catch a little sun and hire out to drive a few nails, on the ground that he and his are likely to become a public charge, and if the union can demand a fabulous, to him, price for a license to work at his trade, if he can find work, the State Government and the labor union together have combined to exclude him from a State of the Great American Union.

And in time Florida may make a deal with Indiana to admit so many carpenters or fry cooks under visitors' vises every winter in return for an undertaking by the State of Indiana to absorb a certain tonnage of Florida's oranges. This all points toward interstate trade agreements and exclusions, passports and workers' permits and a process in this country which some sharp mind has called Balkanization.

But if the 48 States ever fall into the habit of negotiating treaties, each with the 47 others, that will be no solution but rather a hopeless complication, and no one State is going to back-track in the mere hope that those with which it considers itself to be in competition will do likewise out of conscience alone.

State Barriers Should Be Razed

THIS IS something wrong that is going to require Federal initiative and, if necessary, a stout belt over the head with the Federal authority, not in the interests of any power-hungry executive but purely in the interests of the Nation which these States will wreck, provided other causes don't beat them to it.

I like State lines as baffle plates to prevent the sudden rush of political and economic lunacies from one State to another, but State responsibility exists nowadays only in a nominal sense. They don't perform the duties which go with their theoretical rights, and it would clarify matters if someone in the Administration, which obviously has small respect for the States, would come out and say so and prepare to claim the forfeit.

Court Scraps NLRB Rule for CIO

A. F. L. Wins Circuit Tribunal Decision in Runoff Election

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, Ohio, June 28.—A Federal Appeals Court today condemned National Labor Board procedure eliminating from further consideration an A. F. L. union which ran second to a C. I. O. union in an indecisive plant election.

The Labor Board had ruled employes must decide, in the runoff, whether they wanted the C. I. O. or no union at all. The Sixth United States Circuit Court, in a unanimous opinion, said this was like Hobson's choice—in which any one renting a horse had to take the animal nearest the door.

Revision Provided

The court virtually ordered NLRB to revise this runoff election method, which it has customarily followed.

"We think the order was illegal and that the proposed election was unfair in effect," said Judge Xen Hicks.

"The employe was not given full freedom of choice. If he voted, he could either ratify or reject the nominee of the board, but if he rejected it, he was through.

"He had no alternative—he could not choose for himself. He could take the representative offered him or none at all—a parallel of Hobson's choice."

Runoff Voided

The decision set aside an NLRB order for a runoff among 3,000 workers of the Consumers' Power Co., Jackson, Mich.

Originally, in January, the A. F. L. International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers received 1,072 votes and the C. I. O. Utility Workers Organizing Committee received 1,160 in an election to determine which should have recognition as the workers' bargaining agent. In addition, 506 employes voted to accept neither union.

The Labor Board then granted a C. I. O. request for a runoff—with the issue simply C. I. O. or no union. The board said this policy meant men who wanted no union need not have one "forced down their throats." The A. F. L. brotherhood countered with a demand for a runoff between the two unions.

NLRB to Appeal

The Labor Board, which previously has questioned Circuit Courts' jurisdiction in cases involving inter-union differences, indicated it would appeal to the Supreme Court. The board contends a final order must be issued before its actions become subject to review. Judge Hicks commented on this angle:

"Does this court have jurisdiction to review the order complained of, which . . . destroys the right of petitioners as guaranteed by the (Labor Relations) act? We think it does. We cannot think that Congress overlooked this important matter."

President Is Host To 22 Governors; Speeches Barred

Hyde Park, N. Y., June 28 (AP).—Thirteen Democratic and nine Republican governors, from States as distant as Arizona and Florida, were President Roosevelt's luncheon guests today.

At the suggestion of the President, himself a former Governor of New York, speeches and politics were barred while the State executives sat at tables under the lofty trees on the Roosevelt estate.

Wives, children and other relatives brought the guest list up to 69. Mrs. Roosevelt and the President's mother, Mrs. Sara Delano Roosevelt, were hostesses.

The governors drove to Hyde Park from Albany, where they have been holding a conference. After the luncheon Mr. Roosevelt drove to Highland, N. Y., on the opposite shore of the Hudson, and departed for Washington.

The President hopes to return to Hyde Park Sunday morning and stay through July 4 with his mother, who will sail for Europe two days later.

How to Torture Your Husband

Books And Things

By Isabel Patterson

O, Pioneers

CLYDE BRION DAVIS takes a moderate and common-sense view of pioneering and pioneers in his new novel, "Nebraska Coast" (Farrar & Rinehart, $2.50).

The men who settled the frontier, be intimates, were not a breed of heroes of the first rank. Why would they be? And how should such supermen arrive in numbers all at once? Neither were they the riffraff of older regions; they made roads, built homes, established communities and reared their children in the ordinary way of respectability, with slight local variations. However, it may be presumed that some average type could be discovered, or some special temperament trait, which made men seek new country. Mr. Davis selects as the central figure of his story a man who is individual enough, and yet does suggest the frontier type as such.

JACK MACDOUGALL was a farmer in upper New York State, a vigorous, restless, enthusiastic man, but with no bigoted addiction to work for work's sake. One could not call him exactly lazy, either. He liked things to go with an occasional whoop, with nobody to give him orders, and on his own time. He wasn't a drunkard either, but he took a drink once in a while. His idea of humor was practical joking, good-natured personal insults and occasional "risky" allusions. His wife was 30 and inclined to nag.

His first venture away from the farm was canal-boating on the Erie Canal. He didn't make much money, and it was not a luxurious life, but it was a change. The Civil War broke out; Macdougall had his own opinions, sensible enough on the whole, but his neighbors called him a copperhead, in default of better argument. The fact that the eldest son of the Macdougall family had enlisted under age did not stop the mouths of the indignant patriots who stayed at home and took out their patriotism on the elder Macdougall.

Mrs. Macdougall was thus willing to move to Nebraska. The family experienced no hardships en route. Indeed, they traveled by train and steamship most of the way, a modern novelty of progress for them. They had a good choice of land open to them at that period. And they had money enough to build a home. The agricultural settlement of the prairies was effected by small capitalists in the main, and could not have occurred otherwise. It was an overflow, an expansive movement, of good times, never a resource for the relief of hard times. But the latter fallacious idea has been fostered so assiduously of late, as a kind of stock bone for alphabet soup, that it will probably find believers till the end of time.

IN NEBRASKA Macdougall homesteaded on good farm land; but he was still keener on speculative ventures than on the plodding toil of farming. He kept a kind of roadhouse, with the women folks doing the cooking. He sold a little whisky, cigars and general merchandise. When, at last, the railroad caught up with the Macdougalls, they were leading citizens of a thriving town; indeed, they were almost rich.

Macdougall is depicted as intelligent enough on a strictly practical and mechanical level, but with no higher intellect. He could believe an unsubstantiated story when it chimed with his prejudices, but he did not accept pure nonsense. Some of his contemporaries might have thought he did, for he had faith in a "steam wagon" for ordinary road travel, in short, a motorcar. But he believed in it for the right reasons, not as fantasy, but as a perfectly possible mechanical contrivance.

On the other hand, he also believed his general good fortune was sheer merit on his own part. He didn't really understand that there could be or was any higher mental level than shrewdness and mechanics. He was a decent man, with no very fine sensibilities. And he was just shot with luck. The story leaves him on the verge of going to Congress. He may be there yet. One suspects he must be.

There is some authentic local history in the novel. There are also some wearisome passages which give needless offense to the unwary reader.

THE MOST SURPRISING bit of history is gradual identification of a livery stable hand nicknamed "Duck Bill" into a recognizable two-gun man, familiar in the saga of the West under a more romantic cognomen. Mr. Davis presents "Duck Bill" as a sullen, silent, unsociable type of youth, who suddenly became a murderer for money, and escaped the penalty by laxity of the officers of the law. "Duck Bill's" name was William Hickok. That's right—Wild Bill. Mr. Davis went gunning for that legend deliberately, and with information which he may certainly claim to be more authoritative than the "Wild Bill" yarns.

The steam wagon was a real invention. It failed at the time; but one cannot help feeling its inventor, Maj. Joseph R. Brown, did deserve the luck which actually went to the frontier.

240 Radio Stations In Red in 1938, FCC Reveals

By the Associated Press.

The Federal Communications Commission reported yesterday that 240 of the Nation's radio stations had insufficient revenue last year to pay their actual expenses, including depreciation, while 419 stations showed profits.

The report covered 660 of the 764 stations in the United States and its territories.

The 240 unprofitable stations had losses aggregating $2,223,195, while the 419 profitable ones had a net profit of $16,728,533. One station reported neither profit nor loss.

Total revenues of the three major networks and stations were $111,358,378, and total broadcast expenses were $92,503,594.

Stabilizing The Dollar

By Mark Sullivan

Senate Takes Step

WHAT THE SENATE did about the dollar may be a landmark. Few recognized its significance, even after President Roosevelt raised hullaballoo about it. Had not Mr. Roosevelt spoken, it would have passed unnoticed in the crowding procession of measures that Congress must act upon before the end of the fiscal year, Friday. Few of the present generation recognized its significance—to them it was just one more in the welter of the day's events. But to the historian 50 years from now, the Senate's action may appear as the first faint, short step in a long march.

What happened seemed, superficially, slight. The Senate, under leadership by the quiet but able Senator Alva Adams, of Colorado, voted that the President should no longer have power to change the value of the standard dollar, the gold content of it. The President had been given power, in 1933, to reduce the dollar, in his discretion, from—to put it this way—100 cents to 50 cents. The President had actually reduced it, in 1934, to roughly 59 cents. He still had power to reduce it 9 cents more, to 50 cents. The law giving him this power would expire June 30. The President asked Congress to renew the power. The House voted to do so. The Senate voted against it.

House Must Concur Or It's Meaningless

AT MOST, the incident is slight. Unless the House concurs, it will be literally nothing at all. Even if the House agrees, it will merely amount to this—that from Friday on, the United States will have a stable dollar, a dollar with a fixed gold content. Adoption of a fixed gold content is important—but it is only important provided the content stays fixed. It will take years of adherence to that fixed content to create the confidence, among our own people and throughout the world, that would make the step really important.

There are those who do not believe in the step, who believe in having a flexible dollar, a "managed dollar," rather than a fixed one. Others agree with the President, that the action is premature.

But if the action sticks, it will be historically important.

However it may turn out, looking forward to the future, it is at least interesting to look at it from the standpoint of the past. One wonders how Senator Carter Glass feels. And former President Hoover.

Even Great Britain Defaulted On Promise

FOR GENERATIONS, the United States had had a standard dollar of a fixed gold content, roughly 25 grains. It promised to pay dollars of that content to purchasers of its bonds, and to holders of its currency notes, whenever they demanded.

That promise of the United States became, by 1932, about the only promise in the whole world that remained good. Practically every other nation that had made similar promises had defaulted on them. Not only promises about currency, but all sorts of promises had been defaulted.

Some 15 European nations had promised the United States to pay back, in annual instalments, money the United States had loaned them. By late 1932, every nation but one, Finland, had defaulted on that promise. The world had seen the greatest commercial nation in history, Britain, peculiarly committed to the sanctity of promises—the world had seen Britain say it could not keep its promise to pay the United States. Even more disturbing, the world had seen Britain default on its promise to pay gold in exchange for its paper currency. That default almost made a mock of an ancient folk adage of English-speaking peoples. Hardly could it be said any longer, as the highest expression of security and immutability, "as safe as the Bank of England."

Not only public promises but private ones. By early 1933, a people already made nervous and anxious by the wreck of promises everywhere, say literally every bank in the United States—some of their own action, some by command of the Government—not keeping their promises to repay to their depositors the money the depositors had paid in.

Germany's Default Was Willful One

NOT ALL the defaults of promises were willful. Indeed, few were. About the only really willful one was Germany's failure, in 1914, to keep its promise to respect the neutrality of Belgium. From that wanton breach, most of the others followed unavoidably. But, wanton or innocent, the long chain of broken promises had, by 1932, almost destroyed faith throughout the world.

In a world-wide sea of broken promises, the promise of the United States Government remained a rock. To keep it secure, President Hoover sweat blood, through years of economic storm. In the 1932 election campaign Mr. Hoover charged that Mr. Roosevelt, if elected, would break the promise, would "go off gold." Senator Carter Glass, angry, excoriated Mr. Hoover. Mr. Roosevelt publicly congratulated Senator Glass, publicly called attention to the Democratic platform promise of a "sound currency," publicly reiterated his own often repeated promise to live up to the platform.

Mr. Roosevelt was elected. He took office. Six weeks afterward he took the country off gold. Whether justified or not, the world's one rock of promise kept was gone.

The action of the Senate last Monday may possibly be the first step in the slow building up of another of those fabrics of promise, and faith in promise, faith created by promises kept, which is the essential basis of civilization.

Danzig As Key

By Barnet Nover

Why Hitler Covets The Free City

THE RAMIFICATIONS of the present international crisis are far-reaching. They extend all the way from the Rhine and the Vistula to the Pacific, from the North Sea to Suez and beyond, from the Dutch East Indies to Outer Mongolia. There are innumerable points of tension, including such diverse and widely scattered areas as Danzig and the Dobrudja, Tunisia and Tientsin, Somaliland and Shanghai.

Any one of these spots may prove to be the Sarajevo of another world war. At the present moment, however, the most likely candidate for that unhappy distinction is the Free City.

YET DANZIG is no Eldorado. Germany has very little to gain, in the way of immediate material advantages, by the annexation of the Free City. Such a development would only mean the addition of a tiny area containing none of the resources that the Third Reich so desperately needs. It would also mean the reincorporation in Germany of around 400,000 people, compared to the 7,000,000 added by the absorption of Austria and the 10,000,000 that came under German rule following the destruction of Czecho-Slovak independence. And these 400,000 Danzigers are already living under Nazi rule and subject to orders emanating from Berlin.

Why, then, is Hitler making such a fuss over Danzig? Why is the Nazi press unceasingly raising the Free City issue as though Germany's very existence depended on it? Why has Danzig been visited during recent weeks by high Nazi dignitaries, such as Dr. Goebbels, whose presence in the Free City was obviously designed to keep the Danzig pot boiling? And why has Germany found it necessary to smuggle munitions and weapons into that area and create an armed force whose only purpose could be to serve as the instrument of a putsch directed against Poland?

THESE ALARMS and excursions by the Nazis cannot be explained on grounds of sentiment alone. There is, no doubt, a sentimental reason why Hitler wants Danzig, which is almost wholly German in language and sentiment, again made part of the Reich and the gap separating East and West Prussia closed. There is also the factor of Hitler's wounded pride. Having been rebuffed by Warsaw when he offered Poland what he called "his truly unique compromise" he feels it all the more necessary that he ultimately have his way.

But these are, at most, only contributory reasons for the increasingly vehement insistence by the Nazis that Danzig be incorporated in the Third Reich. The fundamental reason for the Danzig campaign is that Danzig is the Achilles heel of Poland and through Poland of the anti-aggression bloc.

IT WAS FREDERICK the Great who said that, "Who rules over the mouth of the Vistula and the City of Danzig will be more master of Poland than the King who rules there."

That remains very largely true today. Without Danzig, Poland's access to the Baltic would become very precarious indeed. In possession of Danzig and in a position to fortify it, Germany would be in a position to cut the Corridor in two and separate Gdynia, the modern port which the Poles have built a few miles west of Danzig, from its hinterland.

Thus, it is hardly too much to say that the fate of Poland depends, to a very real degree, on the fate of Danzig. If the status quo is permitted to remain, Poland's continued independence is assured. On the other hand, if Danzig is made part of Germany, it would be a pistol forever pointed at Poland's head by giving the Third Reich direct or indirect possession of Poland's outlets to the sea. The map proves it. Between the westernmost corner of the Free City area and the nearest point in West Prussia the distance is not more than 16 miles, short enough to permit German artillery to lay down an impenetrable barrage in the present Corridor.

IN OTHER WORDS, the relation which Danzig bears to Poland is that which the Sudetenland bore to pre-Munich Czecho-Slovakia. When the Sudetenland was annexed, what remained of the republic founded by Masaryk and Benes could not survive.

This fact both the Poles and the Nazis fully realize. That is why the Warsaw government rejected Hitler's demands of last March and why the Poles are determined to prevent, by force if necessary, any attempt by Germany to annex the Free City. And that is also why the Nazis regard Danzig as the key issue, so far as they are concerned.

For them Danzig is not an end in itself but a means to an end. Nor is the destruction of Poland's independence, or alternatively, the elimination of Poland as a counter in the game of power politics, the ultimate end of present German policy.

WITH EACH passing month the balance of power, which not so long ago favored the Berlin-Rome axis, is tilting more and more in the other direction. Should this trend continue, the path of expansion would be barred to the Third Reich.

For the Nazis this is an ominous possibility since the pressures within the Third Reich are such that unless given a succession of new outlets an internal explosion may take place.

Already, as a result of the formation of the anti-aggression bloc, incomplete as that bloc is without Russia, it has become very much more dangerous for Germany to commit an aggression than it has been hitherto. That explains the present stalemate in Europe. But the indications are that the Nazi leaders will not permit the situation to remain in status quo very much longer, if they can help it. Which is precisely why, in a world of danger spots, Danzig remains the most dangerous spot of all.

The Eel And The Union

("The electric eel show at the New York World's Fair has been having labor troubles."—News item.)

Consider the electric eel!
He labors at the fair;
He turns on lights and gives a zip
That touches off a flare.

He was so very happy there,
And worked with pep and zeal,
But now he's wounded by the claims
He's not a union eel.

He used to swim about his tank
From early morn 'til night,
Without the slightest feeling that
His hours weren't right.

He'd light up anything when asked,
And liked to generate—
Until he got a notice from
A walking delegate.

He'd scoot about his World's Fair tank—
The job did not seem hard;
He didn't dream an eel would need
A paid-up union card.

He liked to light up little things;
Sparks flew where e'er he sat,
Until the union leader came
And barked: "You can't do that!"

He tried to reason with his boss,
Quite deaf to all appeals,
Who said: "To do a job like this Should take some extra eels."

"One eel upon a job like this
Is something we abhor;
I'm ordering three shifts of eels
And maybe even four."

"There are no other eels about—They're very hard to find."
The eel explained, and added that
The work he didn't mind.

"Our rules are rules," the boss explained,
"I know just how you feel,
But I can't make exception just Because an eel's an eel."

And so the eel he signed a card,
And, though upset, he feels
He's spared the ignominy of signs,
"'Unfair to union eels."

Pleading Pride and Poverty, Man Urges Secret Marriage as "Face Saving" Device; Girl Objects

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: I have been engaged for some time to a young man whom I love sincerely. My parents approve of him and are in favor of the marriage. His family seems to think a great deal of me and his mother has told me that she thinks the best thing he could possibly do would be to marry me and settle down, as he is getting rather restless. But here is our problem: He wants a secret marriage, and that is one thing I have always said I would never agree to.

His only reason for wanting a secret marriage is that he is not able, at this time, to give me the things he would like me to have, since he has some heavy obligations to meet. But he says that he wants to feel that he has me as his own to work for; and that he knows he could make a greater success of his work if he had the assurance that I was his. He proposes that we marry and continue living as we are now, being together only occasionally, until he is able to give me a home without my having to work.

I contend that since I have promised to marry him, and he knows that I love him, that he already has an incentive to settle down and work and wait until we are able to marry openly. Also, since I am now working and making a fairly good salary, I could continue to work even if our marriage should be announced. I have told him I would be willing to marry him now and keep on working; and I think it would be no more than my duty to help him get on his feet. But his pride will not let him see it as I do. He wants me, but he doesn't want the world to know that he isn't able to give me the best.

I don't believe in long engagements; but I do think that we should wait until we can marry openly; or else, be married quietly and announce the fact, while I go on with my work. Do you think he is right in insisting on a secret marriage? Or am I right in holding to my ideas? I shall very much appreciate your advice.

NELL.

Ill-Advised Scheme

DEAR NELL: The false pride, the muddy thinking, evident in your fiance's attitude in this instance argues an essential petty selfishness of character, a distorted social outlook, which makes him a rather second-rate matrimonial bet. No fair-minded person could approve his egocentric willingness to sacrifice your preference, a goodly portion of your happiness and peace of mind, and—it may be—even a considerable slice of your reputation, only in order to meet some curiously twisted standard of his own.

In my opinion, he would be adding insult to injury in possessing you by stealth, only because he is not prepared to contract marriage in the grand style—if, indeed, that is the real reason for his insistence upon a secret ceremony. My advice to you is to refuse, positively and finally, to resort to elopement.

You have, as you say, already given him every conceivable honorable guarantee of the steadfast loyalty and superior quality of your devotion. And if that does not afford him sufficient incentive to work and wait until he can adequately finance an open-and-aboveboard marriage, then it is reasonable to suppose that your becoming his undeclared wife wouldn't turn the trick, either.

One last warning: beware, in every instance, of the man who would lean too heavily—for stability, guidance and inspiration—upon the woman he purports to love. Beware, that is, if you would be counting upon him to assume the proper responsibilities of manhood, which this type of man seldom can or will. The mainspring of a manly man's character and performance exists in his own personality, or else not at all.

Problem for Psychiatrist

DEAR MRS. T. L. W.: While the nature of your problem is, indeed, rather too delicate to be posed in a newspaper column, it is nevertheless a commonplace topic in the field of mental and sexual hygiene. And since it is a problem which vitally affects your marriage, you would be acting the part of a deep-dyed prude and intellectual ignoramus in failing to take it to a gynecologist or psychiatrist for healthfully frank discussion.

Obviously, your husband was guilty of both ignorance and selfishness in shirking his responsibility in the instance cited, but you are guilty of even greater ignorance, it seems to me, in supposing there is evidence of abnormality in his subsequent behavior. As you anticipate, you have need to "alter your viewpoint" toward the situation, just as your husband has need to acquire a better understanding of his obligations in the particular set of circumstances which now prevails.

Any able psychiatrist can supply the enlightenment needed to heal the breach which threatens to spoil your marriage. And if you are without funds to engage a private practitioner, you are eligible for the services of the Washington Institute of Mental Hygiene, 1464 Columbia road northwest, telephone Adams 1033. While there are no books that I know of, which treat specifically with this particular problem in marriage, Dr. Winifred Richmond's "Introduction to Sex Education"—called one of the "sanest" books of the kind ever written—touches on the subject in an intelligent, objective, scientific manner.

Man-Catcher Hats That Don't Startle On Way for Fall

New York (INS).—Two-way millinery and a season of "man-catcher" fashions are en route for fall.

"Let not the back of your head know what the front of your head is doing" and "fascinate your man—don't startle him," are the chic woman's style commandments for winter, laid down by Mme. Lilly Dache, famous designer. Mme. Dache presented her ideas to 200 fashion experts at the World's Fair.

Among startling innovations introduced by Mme. Dache were hats that from the back look like skull caps coming down to a long point and from the front are elaborately draped turbans or flared brims. Many of these two-section chapeaux are even more emphasized by having the front of fur or velvet and the back of felt or fabric.

Gay Prints for July Fourth Wardrobe

Light-hearted prints form the nucleus of the July Fourth wardrobe which debutante Peggy Townsend models here. Peggy Townsend Lists Outfits For July 4th

Clothes She Selects Equally Appropriate For Fair or Resort

By Marshall Adams,
The Post Fashion Editor

MISS PEGGY TOWNSEND has some proposals for Fourth of July week-enders who plan four-day reprieves from office or shop. Being a popular debutante of the year as well as possessing enough business acumen to hold down a supper club singing job in this city and week-end photographic assignments in New York, she is well qualified to suggest such a wardrobe.

MARSHALL ADAMS

As Miss Townsend is enthusiastic about the New York Fair for quick holidays, she recommends outfits tuned to its weather and routine. However, any of the outfits suggested would be equally appropriate for Fourth of July trips to Rehoboth, Virginia Beach or other favorite spots. The attractive deb wisely chose three colors to work around for costumes and accessories. She tabooed formal evening wear for the casual Fair visitor, since no evening accessories need be carried. Here are her suggestions gathered from a local store:

Like Duchess' Prints

A printed ensemble for travel, sightseeing and luncheon at the Fair. Especially notable is the luxurious black and white printed triple sheer coat and dress photographed, which manages at a cost of less than $11, coat and all, to resemble one of the Duchess of Windsor's famous prints.

A black Panorama net frock for dining on Fair terraces or for wining and theater going in Manhattan. Formality of lingerie touches and full skirt make this street length dress an ideal evening gown substitute. It is crush resistant for packing ease.

A sports dress that will do for spectator sports, pavement pounding at the Fair, or for active sports at a country club on Independence Day. Spun rayon in frosty blue and rose print gives versatility to the black and white wardrobe. With this is worn an inexpensive fishnet turban in blue.

Interchangeable Accessories

With both other ensembles nothing could be smarter than a large sailor of red straw. A huge red pigskin bag and a change of white cotton or doeskin gloves completes the accessory array for this wardrobe, plus one pair of all-purpose oxfords in white doeskin, featuring a spectator heel for walking or dancing.

A travel coat should always be included, regardless of hot weather at home, cautioned Miss Townsend. An angora of skirt length and simple styling is excellent for all ensembles mentioned. In a clear shade of blue it will match the blue print and add punch to the blacks and cherry reds.

Finally, a swim suit of individuality. Aqua lastex in an unusual Terry cloth weave is flattering and white Irish lace posies paneled down the front make it more so. For added chic, nothing could pack more easily than a chenille beach lumberjacket which is as short as a chorus girl's skirts. The pajamas and matching robe in blue and white printed crepe pack easily also.

Your Figure Madame!

The Throatline Needs Exercise to Be Kept Truly Beautiful

AFTER 35 OR thereabouts, not one woman in 500 has a truly lovely throatline. Circulation slows up and the tissues relax. Firm contours disintegrate and extra calories turn into double chins. The muscles sag and pull the skin down into folds and wrinkles . . . Crepey throat!

But you don't have to let any of that happen. With a little daily exericse you can keep the throatline firm and young. All told, there are about 15 muscles in the neck. The large muscles are braced by smaller ones and it is upon the tonus of all these muscles that the appearance of the throat depends.

Throat Needs Exercise

Whether your throat is too thin or too plump, it needs special exercise. When thin, scrawny throats are exercised, the muscles become stronger, contours fill out and the wrinkles tend to disappear. Double chins are in need of vigorous exercise. The secret of a well-rounded but clearly defined chin line is not in fat padding or the absence of it, but in good muscle tone.

Massage, friction, cold water, the application of cold cream—all these are beauty aids for the throat. Massage with the hands or friction with a bath brush or towel stimulates the circulation and it's the circulation that nourishes the tissues. Cold water dashed over the throat tones the skin and stimulates the circulation. Lubricants soften and smooth the skin.

But the contour of the throat depends primarily on the muscles and the main thing in throat beauty is exercise. Before you exercise dab on a heavy cream or warm oil and leave it on while exercising. Afterward, remove the cream and dash cold water over the throat.

Improving Throatline

The following exercises will improve your throatline.

POSITION: Standing erect, head turned until point of chin is in line with shoulder.

MOVEMENT: Holding this position, lower the head backward and look up toward ceiling as you slowly circle head around until the chin is over the other shoulder. Repeat slowly eight times.

The second exercise is more strenuous. Take it slowly.

POSITION: Lying on back on bed or chair, head dropped backward.

MOVEMENT: Slowly raise the the head until it is level with the chest, and, just as slowly, lower. Raise and lower six counts; later 10.

Sweet Peas on Prints

Paris (AP).—Sweet peas have first place in the sun in Chanel's collection. Their colors dominate in evening frocks, their patterns in evening prints. Mauves, pinks, blues and crimsons brighten shot taffetas, sheer crepes and filmy laces. A frock in plain mauve taffeta shows a boa of sweet peas encircling the neck and passing diagonally down the bodice front to the waist.

Chicken Tacos On a Tortilla Is Zestful

By Martha Ellyn.
The Post Food Editor.

A FOOD THOUGHT from old Mexico is the one our guest, Mary Mason, brings The Post woman's page readers today. Miss Mason, director of WRC Home Forum, National Broadcasting Co., is ever alert to give her public new information concerning homemaking. She has recently returned from San Antonio, Tex., where she was in charge of an educational exhibit at the National Home Economics Association Convention for the National Broadcasting Co.

Miss Mason

MISS MASON so relished the Mexican sandwich, Chicken tacos, which was served at the Original Mexican Restaurant and the La Fanda, both favorite restaurants of the visiting home economists, that she considers it one of her favorite recipes. Following are her directions for preparing this zestful Mexican sandwich:

Chicken Tacos

"Chicken tacos is made by placing slices of cooked meat or chicken in a tortilla, spreading the same with pickle relish, and then fastening each tacos with two toothpicks so as to hold the edges together. You fry these in deep hot fat, at about 390 degrees, or you can toast them on a hot griddle until they are thoroughly heated and a golden brown in color. Then you spread over these a salad of shredded lettuce and chopped tomatoes, dressed with a rather peppery French dressing and serve at once.

Tacos is generally thought of as being made of roast meat or chicken, either sliced or mint, but sometimes cheese is used for the filling. Incidentally, tortilla can be purchased right here in Washington, so this delectable dish is available even though we are somewhat distant from Mexico."

(Saturday Mary Turner will give her favorite recipe.)

The Gentler Sex

Bride's Evolution

Seeing him sitting unshaved in his undershirt reading the paper ("Oh well, he does look really distinguished when he's dressed up in evening clothes"); seeing him boldly wade into his half-fried chicken with his fingers at the family table, ("Oh well, men just won't bother about all the little table niceties"); viewing the shambles in the bathroom after he has left it ("Men all must be that way from the cartoons and jokes in the papers"); hearing him call to her that as long as she is up anyway, will she please hand him this or that ("Well, of course, the poor fellow is tired").

Ceasing to quote his political and social views to her friends ("Women sound so silly always saying 'Now my husband says' "); waking up to the fact that he is not infallible in knowing what is going to happen at the polls or in Europe ("After all, nobody really knows"); deciding that she might just as well think as she pleases and keep her ideas to herself ("Of course, no two people ever see things exactly alike"); concluding that she has as much a right as anybody to say what she thinks ("After all I didn't sell my soul").

Deciding she will not comb out her screwed-up wave set until the next day so it will be fresh for the party ("He ought to be able to look at me this way for one night"); ceasing to run to put on fresh make-up and the fussy too-long housecoat before he gets home ("I can't be always primping and it simply ruins that housecoat to trail around in the kitchen in it"); treasuring the elaborate negligee or nightgown in tissue paper in the bureau drawer ("I'd have to have something decent if I were to go anywhere on a trip"); cutting down on exercises and the hair brushing when she is tired and looking in the mirror resignedly ("It's just no use to wear myself out trying to fool him. He'll simply have to accept me as I am").

Calmly accepting his irritability, his moroseness, his tantrums, and learning to recognize his bad moods and take to the storm cellar ("Of course he has his faults, but what man hasn't?"); looking at him indulgently preening his feathers and displaying his wit ward explanations of why he was so late getting home ("Oh well, before ingenues and sirens ("Oh well, they're all that way"); accepting philosophically his awk- after all, he's only a man"); thinking of him gently, lovingly, maternally as a big bad brat but with many endearing qualities and also as a pretty gallant fellow who has a hard time at the office, who is overworked and unappreciated, who does the best he can, and who is really better than most men ("Poor darling!").

Norwegian Crown Prince and Princess Climax Round Of Brilliant Parties With Dinner at Own Legation

By Hope Ridings Miller,
The Post Society Editor.

T. R. H., Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha, centered the social stage here yesterday when fetes revolving around them wrote another glamorous chapter in Washington's social history of roving royalty.

Climaxing the round was a dinner in their own Norwegian domain. Several hours earlier the visitors started their Capital whirl at a luncheon given by Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull at the Carlton Hotel. A sizable number of topflight officials attended both events.

The royal visitors negotiated dual roles last night when they served both as hosts and as guests of honor at the Norwegian Legation dinner. Smoothed down to the finest detail by the capable planning of the Norwegian Minister and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne, the event featured a hand-picked gathering of notables, a delicious menu, and champagne toasts to His Majesty, King Haakon, of Norway, and President Roosevelt.

HER ROYAL HIGHNESS, who at yesterday morning's press conference decided she would wear a frock of white satin at the dinner, did. A coronet of pearls and diamonds and a matching necklace and bracelets accented her ensemble. Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne appeared in a cloud of gray tulle, fashioned with a fitted bodice and a full skirt.

Deep yellow calla lilies, yellow roses and shasta daisies adorned the long table at which the company of 30 was seated. Towering ivory candles in silver candelabra spilled stars on the huge mirror that served as a base for the twin bouquets in silver bowls that formed the centerpiece. Smaller bouquets were at either end.

GUESTS INCLUDED the British Ambassador, Sir Ronald Lindsay; the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, the former of whom proposed the toast to Norway's King; Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, the Minister of Denmark and Mme. Wadsted, the Minister of Finland, Hjalmar Johan Procope; Senator and Mrs. Key Pittman, Senator Henrik Shipstead, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles, and the Charge d'Affaires of Sweden and Mme. Wennerberg.

Members of the royal entourage present were the Crown Prince's adjutant, Maj. Ostgaard and Mme. Ostgaard, lady-in-waiting to Her Royal Highness; Capt. N. A. Ramm and Jens Schive. Still others in the company were Mr. and Mrs. James Clement Dunn, George T. Summerlin, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Woods Bliss, who will fete the royal visitors at a dinner tonight, and the Norwegian Counselor and Mme. Galbe.

SEVERAL NOTABLES at the dinner were also on hand for the luncheon given by Secretary and Mrs. Hull for the royal couple. There, as at the dinner, toasts to the President and to King Haakon, who has been called Norway's "crowned president," were high points on the program. Lilting tunes from the scarlet-coated Marine Band Orchestra, under the direction of W. F. Santelmann, added a further colorful note to the event.

Mrs. Hull, who personally supervises her table decorations down to the last rosebud and final spray of fern, never planned a more effective layout than the symphony in white and silver for yesterday's party. Instead of her favorite pink roses, she had selected white ones as being more suitable for the summer season.

At least 500 full-blown blossoms mixed with white delphinium, larkspur, baby's breath and maidenhair fern, formed seven bouquets—five in low silver bowls; two sprouting from tall silver vases. The centerpiece rested on a mirrored plaque edged with fern and rosebuds and flanked with exquisite English urns. Silver pheasants, gracefully sweeping their feathers over the snowy cloth further embellished the pretty picture.

SECRETARY AND MRS. HULL received their 33 guests in the drawing room of the Carlton suite. Tall palms and bouquets of red roses and carnations enhanced the setting. Mrs. Hull wore a frock of powder blue crepe, made with a shirred blouse, long, full sleeves, and a slightly flaring skirt. Her matching hat was set off with a fuchsia veil that blended with the decorative pin at her throat.

Cheerfully facing the barrage of cameras that greeted them at the door of the Carlton Hotel, the Crown Prince and Crown Princess arriving exactly on time, quickly made their way to the room where their host and hostess were waiting. Her Royal Highness was trimly turned out in a suit of fur-trimmed orchid crepe with a straight skirt and a three-quarter length coat. Her small purple hat matched the deeper tones of her orchid corsage and her other accessories blended with the beige fur collar of her coat.

GUESTS, in addition to Their Royal Hignesses, the Minister of Norway and Mme. Morgenstierne and members of the royal entourage, were Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, Attorney General Frank Murphy, Secretary of Commerce Harry Hopkins, Mrs. Charles A. McNary, Senator and Mrs. Walter F. George, Representative and Mrs. Robert L. Doughton, Mrs. Sol Bloom, Representative Edith Nourse Rogers, Representative Jere Cooper, the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. Sumner Welles.

Also, Mrs. Lucille Foster McMillan, of the Civil Service Commission; Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Roosevelt; Mr. and Mrs. Jesse Jones, George T. Summerlin, David Lawrence, Ulric Bell, Miss Ramona Lefevre, Miss Beth Campbell, Lieut. Col. Harold M. Rayner, American military aide to the Crown Prince, and Commander Robert B. Carney, American naval aide to His Royal Highness.

Menu for Norwegian Royalty A Melange of Europe's Best

Luncheon at the Carlton Combines Some Outstanding Dishes of World's Leading Cuisines; Chicken Norwegian Also Piece de Resistance

Norwegian, American, French and Italian cookbooks were combed for dishes to set before T. R. H., Crown Prince Olav and Crown Princess Martha at the luncheon and the dinner on yesterday's calendar. "Chicken Norgebian," cooked in butter and served steaming under a blanket of parsley sauce, and vanilla and strawberry ice cream frozen in apple-shaped molds were features on the dinner menu.

Under the watchful eye of Alfred, maitre d'hotel of the Carlton, who has planned many a meal to the royal taste, the luncheon menu was embellished with such delicious dishes as filet of sole with mousse of brook in crown shape and Neapolitan ice.

Both menus in full follow:

Edna P. Jones Is Married to John Walsh

Couple to Live Here After a Vacation In Glacier Park

In the presence of members of the two families and close friends, Miss Edna Preble Jones, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edwin Preble Jones, of Washington, was married yesterday morning to John Walsh, brother of the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh, of Montana.

The ceremony took place in Holy Trinity Church at 10 o'clock, the Rev. Lawrence Kelly officiating. Following a wedding breakfast at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John C. Keane, brother-in-law and sister of the bride, the couple left for Glacier National Park. They will spend the summer at Lake MacDonald there and on their return will be at home after September 15 at the Woodward Apartments, 2311 Connecticut avenue.

The bride is an old friends of the Walsh family, and is godmother to one of the children of Mrs. Augustus C. Long, daughter of the bridegroom by a first marriage.

Mr. Walsh, who is a native of Wisconsin, came to Washington early in the first Wilson Administration to serve as special counsel to the Federal Trade Commission. He later opened his own office here.

Present at the ceremony yesterday were Mrs. Joseph Byrn, sister of the bride; Corridon Jones, their brother, with whom the bride has made her home here since the death of their parents; John Wattawa, nephew of Mr. Walsh; Miss Elinor Cudger, daughter of Capt. and Mrs. Emmet C. Cudger, U. S. N., and a granddaughter of Senator Walsh, and Miss Rose Shea.

Betty Boschen, Edgar Morris Wed in Fort Myer Chapel

Benson-Weeks

MRS. EDGAR MORRIS, jr.

Bride Wears Gown Of White Net, With Short, Puff Sleeves

At a candle light service in the flower-banked Fort Myer chapel yesterday, Miss Betty Boschen, daughter of the Chief of Finance, Maj. Gen. Frederick Wegener Boschen, and Mrs. Boschen, became the bride of Edgar Morris, jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Morris. Chaplain Walter B. Zimmerman officiated at the 4:30 ceremony. Fred East sang the nuptial music.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride was gowned in white net, fashioned with a tight bodice, short puff sleeves, a sweetheart neckline and a very long, full, double net skirt ending in a train. Her long veil of bridal illusion was held by a coronet of orange blossoms. She carried an old-fashioned bouquet of gardenias and lilies of the valley.

Cousin of Bride Is Matron of Honor

Mrs. Tracy Axton, cousin of the bride, was the matron of honor and was gowned in pale pink net. The gown was fashioned with a tight bodice, puffed sleeves and a very full skirt. She carried a loose arm bouquet of pastel flowers.

Bridesmaids were Mrs. James Wimsatt, who was gowned in lavender; Miss Dorothy Highfield, gowned in blue; Miss Polly Wirgman, who wore yellow, and Miss Joanne Smith in pale green. All the bridal attendants were gowned alike in full-skirted double-tiered net gowns. They carried loose arm bouquets of roses, delphinium and other pastel flowers to match the dresses.

Alan MacGraw was the best man. Ushers included James Wimsatt, Ralph Houser, David Humphries and Bradley Edelblut.

Reception Follows At Country Club

Following the ceremony there was a reception at the Army-Navy Country Club. Mrs. Boschen was gowned in rose chiffon and lace and wore a rose and blue hat to match. The bridegroom's mother wore a gown of dark blue lace.

When the couple left for their wedding trip, the bride was wearing a blue and white print frock with a white wool coat and matching accessories. Following a motor trip honeymoon, they will make their home at their newly built house at 4700 Dalton road, Brookdale, Md.

Among the out-of-town guests who attended were: Mr. and Mrs. John Hines, of Garden City, Long Island; Mrs. Tracy Axton, of Louisville, Ky.; Mrs. Thomas Clark of Rock Island, Illinois; Mrs. Cornelius Gardener, of California; Capt. and Mrs. Charles Hensey, of Fayetteville, N. C.

The bride attended the California School of Fine Arts and the Corcoran Art School. Mr. Morris is a graduate of Clemson College of South Carolina and Georgetown University Law School.

Gloria Grosvenor To Sail Tomorrow For South America

Miss Gloria Grosvenor, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Gilbert Grosvenor, will sail tomorrow from New York at noon for South America on the S. S. Santa Elena.

Miss Grosvenor will go directly to Caracas, where she will visit her cousin, Miss Anita Kerr. From there she will go on to the Panama Canal Zone to visit her cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Graham Fairchild, and will return to the United States about the end of July.

Dr. and Mrs. Grosvenor will leave in about ten days for Baddeck, Nova Scotia, where they maintain their summer home.

Miss Beverly Marshall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Rowland S. Marshall, entertained at luncheon in the Louis Seize room at the Shoreham yesterday in honor of Miss Grosvenor.

Mrs. Malin Craig Guest of Honor

Mrs. Albert H. Blanding, wife of Maj. Gen. Blanding, Chief of the National Guard, entertained yesterday at luncheon in honor of Mrs. Malin Craig, wife of Gen. Craig, Chief of Staff, who will retire in September.

The event was held at the Army-Navy-Town Club, and the guests included Mrs. Robert M. Danford, wife of Maj. Gen. Danford, Chief of Field Artillery; Mrs. Archibald Sunderland, wife of Maj. Gen. Danford, Chief of Field Artillery; Mrs. Archibald Sunderland, wife of Maj. Gen. Sunderland, Chief of Coast Artillery; Mrs. Joseph O. Mauborgne, wife of Maj. Gen. Mauborgne, Chief of Signal Corps; Mrs. Walter C. Baker, wife of Maj. Gen. Baker, Chief of Chemical Warfare Service; Mrs. Frank C. Burnett, wife of Brig. Gen. Burnett, assistant to the Adjutant General; Mrs. Claude Miller, wife of Col. Miller; Mrs. Clarence Tinker, and Miss Betty Blanding, daughter of the hostess.

Dominican Leader Will Visit Here

And still they come! While the Capital is busy entertaining the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Norway not much more than a fortnight after they did the same for the King and Queen of England, news arrives that Gen. Rafael L. Trujillo, former President of the Dominican Republic, will visit Washington.

The Minister of the Dominican Republic and Senora de Pastoriza will entertain at a large reception in honor of the distinguished visitor, to be given at the Pan American Union on the evening of July 8.

Although the date is not quite yet settled, Gen. Trujillo will probably arrive in Miami on July 6, and will journey to Washington from there.

Business Cut-Throats in South Denounced at Women's Meeting

Maj. Fletcher Hits Those Who Depress Living Conditions

By Jessie Ash Arndt,
The Post Club Editor.

A large number of actions to obtain wage and hour benefits for workers in the South under the fair labor standards act have not been filed in Southern courts, but in New York and Philadelphia, where the operators are incorporated, Maj. A. J. Fletcher, assistant administrator of the wage and hour division, Department of Labor, declared yesterday. Addressing a group of women who meet fortnightly at the Woman's National Democratic Club to discuss problems of the South, he denounced "racketeers who want to live by cutting the throats of their business competitors and depressing living standards all over the South."

People who came down to the South and bought up depressed properties at bargain prices "found it easy to amass handsome profits from their absentee ownership," he said, "without assuming any of the responsibilities which ownership rightfully owes to the community."

Responsible Employers Support Relief

Citing such examples of evasion of the law as those of a woman who worked 36 hours and was forced to sign a statement that she had worked only four and received only a dollar for her week's work, and of another who received only 50 cents for an eight-hour day, he pointed out that the result of exploitation of the workers was a heavy relief burden on the community.

"Ironically enough, the responsible competitors of those employers, who paid their own workers fair wages, had to help at the tax collector's window to subsidize the very people who were doing their best to ruin them. We stopped that practice, and you can chalk that up as another effect of the wage-hour legislation upon the South."

Monthly indices, said Maj. Fletcher, show that employment increased each of the first four months of this year over corresponding months of last year and that price indices decreased. "Thousands of men and women throughout the South today are getting more money than they ever got before last October. They constitute an army of new consumers—new in the sense that they are now able to buy many things they couldn't afford before."

Women's Group To Continue Meetings

With vast natural resources, the South has been short-sighted in failing to capitalize on its opportunities, he said. "I know one Southern bank in which $38,000,000 is lying idle at this very moment. And I mean cash, not bonds or other securities. In other banks throughout the South are millions more. And, while spiders spin webs over untold wealth, we continue to export the profits from Southern industry to investors who live elsewhere . . . We must use more of our resources for our own benefit, and the fair labor standards act is at least one important device that will help us to do that. Its enactment was one of the best things that have happened in the South in 70 years."

Pay-Hour Division Aide Also Assails Absentee Owners

The group addressed by Maj. Fletcher has been meeting on alternate Wednesdays for the past two months. There are no officers and any Southern woman, whatever her party affiliations, is eligible to attend. The purpose of the women is to hear officials in administrative and executive positions discuss the work of their divisions as it affects the South. About 30 women have been attending the luncheons and have invited their speakers with the understanding that their remarks be off-the-record if they desired. Those preceding Maj. Fletcher took advantage of this provision and, until now, no publicity has been given to the informal gatherings of the group. The meetings will continue during the summer.

Mrs. May Thompson Evans, assistant director of the Women's Division of the Democratic National Committee, presided yesterday.

Miss Benfer Takes Grand Guardian Oath

Job's Daughters Install Officers At Wardman Park

Miss Mary Benfer last night was installed as grand guardian of the Order of Job's Daughters of the District at the closing session of the two-day grand council meeting. The installation, attended by members and friends of the order, was held at the Wardman Park Hotel after a buffet supper.

Mrs. Mary E. Teachum, who is retiring grand guardian, remains as guardian of Bethel 1, which she has headed since it was founded under her supervision 16 years ago. The associate guardian of Bethel 1 is Henry Yeager. Mrs. Nellie Brattain is guardian of Bethel 2, with William Newman, newly elected associate grand guardian, as associate guardian; Mrs. Maria Hotis, guardian of Bethel 3, with William Fox, new vice associate grand guardian as associate guardian; guardian, as associate guardian; Bethel 4, with Karl Plitt as associate guardian; Mrs. Hiawatha Robinson, guardian of Bethel 5, with Mr. Robinson as associate guardian, and Mrs. Ella Dowden, guardian of Bethel 6, with Edmund Gray, associate guardian.

Harry Schmidt, past associate supreme guardian, was the installing officer, with Mrs. Laura Wallace, past grand guardian and also supreme librarian, as installing guide; William Dunham, past associate grand guardian, installing marshal; Mrs. Sallie Wilson, past supreme conductress, installing musician; Mrs. Virginia Burnham, installing chaplain; Louis Carl, past grand guardian of Maryland, and vice associate supreme guardian, installing secretary.

Mrs. Virginia Thompson, of Hyattsville, Md., supreme guardian, was guest of honor. Mrs. Thompson will preside at the supreme guardian council session which will be held in San Francisco in August, with a delegation from the Washington Bethels attending.

'Soroptimists' Meet, Recess For Summer

The Soroptimist Club held its final luncheon before the summer recess yesterday at the Willard Hotel, although the members will meet informally at the Willard Coffee Shop at 1 p. m. Wednesdays.

The club observed Soroptimists own day, as is customary once a month, with a Soroptimist as speaker and celebration of the birthdays of members born in that month.

Mrs. Ruth Baker, whose Soroptimist classification is assistant sales manager of the Western Union Telegraph Co., talked on "The Romance of a Great Industry," describing its services.

Following her talk, Mrs. Ruth Fernsler and Mrs. Charlotte LaFond sang two duets, accompanied by Mrs. Jewell Downs. Birthday songs were given in honor of Mrs. Mary Chmylko and Mrs. Claudia Brown.

Girl Scouts to Present Norse Princess With Towels; Irene Wright, Legal Sorority President, to Take Bar Examination

IRENE VIVIAN WRIGHT, who has just been graduated with honors from the National University School of Law, is president of Alpha Lambda Chapter of Phi Delta Delta, international legal sorority, and business manager of the quarterly magazine of the organization. After taking the D. C. bar examinations this week, she will leave for her home in Michigan for the remainder of the summer. Miss Wright resides at the Roosevelt Hotel and is employed in the Treasury Department.

MISS IRENE WRIGHT

TOMORROW MORNING, when H. R. H. Crown Princess Martha of Norway honors the American Girl Scouts with a visit to their national Little House, the two young daughters of the Counselor of the Norwegian Legation and Mme. Jorgen Galbe will be among the girls there to welcome her.

Grete Galbe will be dressed in the uniform of a Norwegian girl guide, but Clara, who is an active member of Troop 30 here, will wear the regulation American Girl Scout uniform. She will stand beside Dorothy Kramer, of Troop 22, of the Neighborhood House, when she presents to the Crown Princess the hand-woven linen guest towels she has made. The towels, of natural colored linen, have blue border and knotted fringe.

MAY THOMPSON EVANS, who is president of the local Alumnae Club of the North Carolina College for Women, organized this year, came back from attending the commencement and alumnae reunion at the college with the responsibility of the national presidency on her shoulders. There are about 70 alumnae of the college in Washington. Their club meetings will be resumed in September.

EVA WHITFORD LOVETTE, president of the D. C. Federation of Music Clubs, will present a group of her artist and student vocalists tonight in the last studio recital of the season, in the Dmitrieff-Gnoocheff studio, 5612 Connecticut avenue.

The singers to be presented are, in the order of their appearance: Kathryn Furmage, Sally Dudley, Helen Dunbar, Gloria Masgoret, Helen Vrooman, Mary Schmitt, Esther Smith Bond, Marion Leigh, Elise Free, Kathleen French Crisp, Violet Hobbs, Hattie Moler, Carolyn Schulte, Hazel Cake and Francise Bass Wilson. Florence Shelley Nielson will assist with the accompaniments.

MRS. VICTOR O'Kelliher, a member of the Army and Navy Group of the Women's City Club, will entertain the members and guests at the weekly supper this evening with a talk on Mexico and "The World of Tomorrow." Mrs. O'Kelliher will have on display articles she brought from Mexico and both fairs recently.

Songs of Old Mexico will be sung by Florette Joser, lyric soprano, who has spent much time there.

Fog May Delay Induction of Judge Howorth

Ship Is Held Up With New President of Professional Women

Judge Lucy Sommerville Howorth, new president of the Business and Professional Women's Club, of Washington, will be honored with other new officers at a dinner to be given the club tonight in the East Room of the Mayflower Hotel—that is, providing her ship come in.

Judge Howorth, who has been in Tronheim, Norway, attending the council meeting of the International Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs as delegate from the American Federation, was to have arrived the first of the week. But fog descended along the Atlantic Coast and her ship was delayed so that members of the committee arranging the dinner have been in a state of uncertainty ever since Monday about the time of her arrival. The boat is expected to dock at New York this morning. If it is delayed until later in the day, Judge Howorth will fly to Washington to be here in time for the dinner, a message received through the B. and P. W. headquarters in New York assures the club.

To Tell of Trip to Norway

A feature of the program will be a short talk by the new president on her experiences abroad and the work of the international federation. Miss Nina Kinsella, retiring president, will preside.

The installation will be conducted by Miss Earlene White, president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, and a member of the Washington branch. There will also be entertainment, including piano solos by Miss Betty Batchelder and a sleight of hand performance by Charles Townsley.

Miss June Phul is chairman of the committee for the dinner, assisted by Miss Esta Lamb, Miss Maxey Mayo, Mrs. Ella Lou Harrison, Miss Catherine O'Donnell and Miss Elba Humphries.

New officers to be honored with Judge Haworth include Mrs. Marion Britt, first vice president; Miss Sallie Wells, recording secretary; Mrs. Ethel Ashman, corresponding secretary; Miss Margaret Alice Hickman, treasurer; Mrs. Katherine Winston and Mrs. Sarah D. Griffith, directors.

Retiring officers, in addition to Miss Kinsella, are Judge Howorth, as vice president; Miss Margaret E. Ralston, recording secretary; Miss Mary Jane Mellinger, corresponding secretary; Miss Gertrude E. Wiber, treasurer; Miss Emily E. Clark and Miss Bertha N. Nienburg, directors.

Many Members Will Attend

Others who will attend the dinner include Mrs. Emma Hall, who will be the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Ashman; Mrs. Louise Baker, Elizabeth M. Barnes, Odella Bates, Ruth Baker, Mrs. Clara Beetle, Mrs. Edith M. Birks, Clara Boone, Elizabeth H. Brooks, Blanche Brown, Marion Bogart, Bertha M. Fairfax Board Ends Business Of Old Year

Franklin P. Sagendorf Renamed Electrical Inspector for County

FAIRFAX BUREAU OF THE POST,
P. O. BOX 245, Fairfax, Va.
Phone Falls Church 2038-M.

The county board of supervisors at a special meeting yesterday concluded its business and accounts for the current fiscal year ending Friday.

Franklin P. Sagendorf, of Fairfax, was reappointed electrical inspector for the next fiscal year. He was instructed to check building permits when making an inspection of electrical work on new construction where the cost of all work exceeds $250. When he discovers building operations in violation of the county permit ordinance, he is to notify the Commonwealth's attorney.

The board appropriated $15,654 as the county's share of the cost of the county welfare department for the next year. The money is to be paid in monthly installments to the credit of the county welfare board.

It was announced an agreement had been reached between the welfare department and the county community chest association on the question of hospitalization of marginal persons and others not on relief rolls.

The application of the school board for a State literary loan of $10,000 for additions and sanitary facilities at the Chesterbrook School was approved by the supervisors. Superintendent of Schools W. T. Woodson, told the board that work would be started as soon as the project is approved by the State department of education.

The filing fees of Democratic candidates in the primary who are unopposed were authorized returned. The candidates included William D. Medely, candidate for State Senator, Delegate Francis Pickens Miller, Supervisor J. Wallace Carper, of Providence District; Supervisor G. W. Buckley, of Centreville District, and candidates for justice of the peace and constables from the various magisterial districts.

Application to operate commercial hog farms in accordance with the county ordinance were received from W. F. Hawley, of Lorton, and Dr. J. H. Ferguson, of Clifton.

A short session of the board will be held at the regular meeting on July 5 as the board plans to adjourn at noon when the members will leave to attend the sessions of the Virginia League of Counties on July 6 and 7 at the Virginia Polytechnic Institute at Blacksburg.

Mrs. Twombley Honored

Montgomery Board Majority Denies Coup to Control Police

President Hampton Declares Charge By Commissioner Oxley Untrue And Cites Reasons for Board Action

MONTGOMERY COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST.
Telephone SHepherd 4300.

A charge by Montgomery County Commissioner John E. Oxley that the other members of the board abolished his post of police commissioner so they could seize political control of the police force was denied yesterday by President Thomas E. Hampton.

In a climax to the factional feud between Commissioner Oxley, former Fusionist, and the three Democratic organization members of the board, Commissioner Hampton declared:

"Commissioner Oxley has seen fit to make a totally untrue charge that our action was based upon a desire on the part of the majority members to be able to take more direct political control of the police trial board. One answer to this charge is that there are now no charges pending against members of the county police force and until such cases develop there is no foundation of any kind for the charge. The majority members of the board further resent Mr. Oxley's charge of political motives on every ground and particularly on the ground that no member of the board has been more political and more factional than Mr. Oxley has attempted to be since his election."

President Hampton gave four reasons for the board's action in removing Oxley as police commissioner. They were that Oxley supported a "factional and political friend" for police chief, that he opposed the 15 police appointees recommended by the majority members, that he supported his "political friend" for chairman of the police trial board, and that he refused to support the police bill when asked for an opinion by Gov. O'Conor.

"We believe that Mr. Oxley is out of sympathy with our efforts to improve police conditions in Montgomery County and consequently feel both justified and required to remove him as police commissioner," Hampton said.

Commissioner Oxley denied he fell out with the majority members of the board over their failure to act favorably on his recommendation for police chief. He said he seconded Chief Charles M. Orme's appointment.

E. Brooke Lee, former State senator, was accused by Oxley of "having the ax out for him."

2 Boys Accused Of Starting 4 Fires In Prince Georges

Two boys, one 10 and the other 11, were charged with arson yesterday by Prince George County police in connection with four fires in the neighborhood of Seabrook, Md., where they live. They will be tried in Hyattsville Police Court tomorrow.

Prince Georges County Policeman Louis Mackall said the youths had confessed to setting fire to the Seabrook elementary school, their own home, their father's and a neighbor's garage. They also admitted breaking into a store to obtain matches.

The gargae was destroyed. No damage resulted from the other fires, police said.

Alby, The Albino Squirrel, Has Candid Cameramen Up a Tree

The White Phantom of Jesup Blair Park Won't Pose and Can't Be Caught Napping; He's Been a Hermit Since Cousins Vanished

Alby the Albino has Washington area camera enthusiasts up a tree. Camera shy to the nth degree, Alby not only refuses to pose but refuses to be trapped in a candid camera position.

Alby, a snow-white pink-eyed squirrel, makes his home among the protective trees of Jesup Blair Park, Silver Spring, just over the District line in Maryland.

His admirers, who first saw him two years ago, say the trigger-nerved animal has yet to have his profile snapped, although scores of ardent lens devotees have tried time and again to snare Alby with their cameras.

The grey squirrels resident in the park rather like to be petted by picnickers, and even share a dainty morsel or two with them, but not Alby.

Alby might be characterized as a lone wolf. He won't even join his bushy-tailed brethren in breaking bread and toast with Park Superintendent Louis A. Yost each morning. He prefers solitude.

Two years ago, park veterans will tell you, there were two other albinos, and with them Alby spent his days, gamboling his time away. Last year, however, Alby's white companions disappeared as mysteriously as they came. Since, Alby has taken up his shy ways and seemingly sulky moods.

Dr. Snead To Take Post In Arlington

Virginia Medical College Graduate Named Successor To Dr. P. W. Bowden

ARLINGTON COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, Clarendon, Va. Tel. OXford 0509.

Frank C. Hanrahan, county manager, announced yesterday the appointment of Dr. H. Garnett Snead, of Lancaster County, Va., as assistant health officer to succeed Dr. Paul W. Bowden, recently appointed health officer of Southampton County, Va.

Dr. Snead was graduated in 1938 from the Medical College of Virginia, in Richmond, and for the past year has been an interne at the Baroness Erlanger Hospital in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Dr. Snead will come to the county to assume his duties on July 10 and will reside in Colonial Village.

Dr. Bowden, who came to the county in November, will assume his duties in Southampton County on July 10. He is a graduate of the University of Cincinnati.

Tax Deadline Tomorrow

Arlington—Tomorrow will be the last day to pay 1938 State and personal property taxes to save an added 6 per cent to all unpaid bills, County Treasurer Charles T. Jesse announced yesterday.

He said the taxes due include those on real estate and personal property, which will yield several thousand dollars more this year than in 1938, due to the rapid increase in population.

Jesse's office at the courthouse is open from 8:30 a. m. to 4:30 p. m.

County Board to Meet

Arlington.—The county board, at its meeting today, will receive bids which have been opened for furnishing material, labor and equipment for all road surface work for the fiscal year beginning July 1.

Among matters to be considered will be a number of applications for rezoning of property in several sections of the county and the draft of a noise ordinance which has been prepared by Commonwealth's Attorney Lawrence W. Douglas.

Mental Hygiene Society

Arlington.—The Mental Hygiene Society, of which Mrs. Henry Ames is president, was voted to membership in the Council of Social Agencies at its meeting last night in the courthouse.

The council, of which Hugh McGrath is chairman, is made up of the Instructive Visiting Nurses Association, Boy and Girl Scouts, the county welfare board and the Social Hygiene Society.

Kiwanis See Magic

Country Club Hills.—Members and guests of the Arlington Kiwanis Club, at its luncheon meeting yesterday at the Washington Golf and Country Club, were entertained by Harry Baker, magician and member of the Washington Kiwanis Club. Mr. Baker, who always entertains the underprivileged children who are guests of the local club at its annual Christmas party, exhibited many new tricks.

President John A. Cummins reported to the club members the proceedings of the Kiwanis International Convention in Boston. He, with W. Rodes Lewis, were delegates, and Vice President Erle R. Kirby and I. C. Warner were alternates.

At the convention, which was the twenty-third annual one in the history of Kiwanis International, Bennett O. Knudson, of Albert Lea, Minn., was elected president.

Other officers elected are Charles S. Donley, Pittsburgh, vice president for the United States and Robert J. Prittie, Winnipeg, vice president for Canada; Dr. W. Eugene Walcott, Des Moines, treasurer, H. G. Hatfield, of Oklahoma City, is immediate past president.

Symphony Quota Exceeded

Livingstone Heights.—Miss Christine Church, chairman of the Arlington unit of the suburban committee for the National Symphony Orchestra, last night reported that the local unit raised more than its quota at the benefit given Monday night on the lawn at the home of Mrs. P. T. Marye, 2400 North Twenty-fourth street. One of the honored guests was the grandson of Anton Dvorak, who wrote "The New World Symphony."

Miss Church announced that the benefit would become an annual event.

Bible School Graduation

Clarendon.—Graduation exercises of the Daily Vacation Bible School, which has been conducted at the Clarendon Baptist Church for the last two weeks, will be held tomorrow night at the church at 7:45 o'clock.

Of the class, which has had an average attendance of 65, there will be 45 who will receive certificates for accredited work.

The Rev. Aaron B. Kelley, assistant pastor of the Clarendon Baptist Church and principal of the school, has been assisted by F. P. Auto Fatalities Up in May, Still Under 1938's

Chicago, June 28 (AP).—The National Safety Council announced today that a decline in motor vehicle fatalities which began in November, 1937, had continued through May.

But the downward trend was nearly broken in May, when, the council estimated, 2,330 lives were lost—just 50 fewer than in May, 1938.

Nevertheless, the Nation showed a 7 per cent improvement in the first five months of the current year. Fatalities in the period numbered 11,010 against 11,850 in the same time last year.

Prince Georges Police Court Challenged

Judge Overrules Motion Questioning Authority on Ordinances

PRINCE GEORGES COUNTY BUREAU OF THE POST, 931 Rhems Ave., Hyattsville, Md. Telephone GReenwood 3300.

Bird H. Dolby, Mount Rainier attorney, yesterday attempted unsuccessfully to challenge the authority of the Prince Georges County Police Court to try violations of town ordinances.

Dolby's motion to quash proceedings against H. M. Brunk, charged with violating the Hyattsville building ordinance, was overruled by Judge Walter Green, who later dismissed the charge.

The attorney claimed the town charter specified that only the justice of the peace, resident in the town, was authorized to try cases involving violations of municipal ordinances.

Dolby's action was the first attempt in Prince Georges County to challenge the authority of the police court, recently reorganized by State Legislature. In Anne Arundal County, however, the new court system has been under fire by justices of the peace, who have instituted proceedings to test its constitutionality.

Youth fined $50

Hyattsville.—A 18-year-old Washington youth was fined $50 in police court here yesterday on a charge of assaulting Ernest Fowler, war veteran, with a beer bottle, Sunday night.

The youth and a companion testified they had been drinking beer at the Snug Harbor Tavern on Crain highway shortly before the fracas that resulted in Fowler's injury.

After the trial a warrant was ordered by State's Attorney M. Winship Wheatley, jr., charging Alvin P. Moreland, licensee of the tavern, with selling alcoholic beverages to minors. Both youths were summoned to testify as State's witnesses.

Md. Democratic Club Opposes Relief Slash

Opposition to any cut in relief funds was voted last night by the Patuxent (Md.) Democratic Club.

The group voted in favor of present relief expenditures as "a real benefit to the State of Maryland," and decided to inform Senators Tydings and Radcliffe and Representative Sasscer, all of Maryland, of the stand.

Cornelius Ryan presided.

O'Conor Names G. W. Dorsey Tobacco Chief

Prince Frederick Man Is Made Commissioner Of Leaf Marketing

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., June 28.—Gov. Herbert R. O'Conor announced tonight the appointment of George W. Dorsey, of Prince Frederick as commissioner of tobacco marketing under the new law passed by the last Legislature.

Dorsey, a native of Calvert County, was "highly recommended for the position," the Governor said.

"I am deeply interested in the welfare of tobacco growers and feel that the future success of marketing their product depends upon the assistance which the State can give. By eliminating objectionable practices and co-operating toward the establishment of proper regulations, a step in the right direction will be taken to safeguard their interests."

Dorsey has been engaged in business for 30 years. He was county chairman of the National Recovery Administration and subsequently manager of the national employment office in Calvert County. Previously, he had been deputy collector of internal revenue.

"Having lived in Calvert County all his life," the Governor's statement said, "he is familiar with all phases of the tobacco industry and enjoys the confidence and respect of the citizens of his own and neighboring counties.

"In appointing Mr. Dorsey, I am convinced that the organization of this new office is in safe hands."

V. F. W. Elects S. B. DeVaughan Comander in Alexandria

The Washington Post Bureau, 907 Prince St., Alexandria, Va. Phone Temple 3767 Delivery Service, Phone Alex. 247.

Samuel B. DeVaughan, of Alexandria, was chosen department commander at the closing session yesterday of the seventeenth annual encampment of the Department of Virginia, Veterans of Foreign Wars. Mrs. Lillian Duffy, of Ocean View, was elected president of the Ladies Auxiliary, at the fourteenth gathering of that group, held in conjunction with the veterans. Roanoke was selected as the place for the 1940 convention.

Other officers chosen were Oscar J. Jungbluth, of Craddock, senior vice commander; W. D. Morgan, of Roanoke, junior vice commander; William I. Wooddell, of Staunton, the retiring department commander, was made quartermaster; the Rev. James E. Stingley, of Norfolk, was re-elected chaplain; A. O. Lynch, of Norfolk County, judge advocate; Dr. Harry F. White, of Staunton, surgeon, and C. H. Sipes, jr., of Arlington, was appointed adjutant.

Other auxiliary officers elected are: Mrs. Cecelia Bryan, Staunton, senior vice president; Mrs. Mary Williford, Norfolk, junior vice president; Mrs. Cleopatra Wehn, Staunton, chaplain; Mrs. Ruby Breitenbach, Ocean View, conductress; Mrs. Helen Folds, Portsmouth, guard; Mrs. Eleanor Percival, Ocean View, secretary, and Mrs. Margery Powers, Ocean View, chief of staff. Resolutions were adopted by the convention favoring trial by jury in cases where persons, or firms, selling beer are cited by the A. B. C. board for infractions of the rules; favoring increased pensions for widows and dependent parents of war veterans where the veteran died of service disability.

Announcement was made that $7,500 has been paid for the Virginia cottage at the National V. F. W. Home, in Eaton Rapids, Mich., and that seven Virginia children are now in the cottage.

Prizes were presented for the winners in the drum and bugle corps contests, staged on Monday night, and also for the parade on Tuesday afternoon. They were:

Rogers Elected C. of C. Head In Kensington

Unit Calls for New Elementary School, Issuance of Bonds

Kensington Chamber of Commerce last night elected W. A. Rogers as its president.

Other officers chosen at a meeting in Kensington Elementary School include Kenneth Simpson, first vice president; Edward Farrell, second vice president; John Moran, secretary; George Smith, treasurer; Robert L. Lewis, Walter Pratt, Richard F. Green, Raymond Burgdorf, board of directors; Edward Northup, Charles Jones, Alfred D. Noyes, delegates, and Harry Appleby, Charles Lane, Lawrence Smoot, alternates, to the Montgomery County Civic Federation.

A resolution urged the county commissioners to issue bonds up to $75,000, as authorized by the Legislature, for immediate construction of a road from North Chevy Chase to Kensington, along the old street car right of way.

The unit adopted a program which called for:

Erection of a new elementary school to replace the present structure, termed "obsolete and a fire hazard."

Setup Law A Headache To Md. Clubs

Private Organizations Find It Good, but Taproom Owners Say It's Hard to Keep

Montgomery County country clubs are in favor of the new State liquor law enacted at the last session of the Legislature which prohibits sale of "set-ups" for liquor not bought on the premises, but the Legislature is proving a "headache" for night club owners.

The country clubs have complained frequently to authorities that their members were buying liquor in Washington and buying set-ups at the clubs to the detriment of club profits. Night club operators will be forced to confine their patrons' drinking to beer purchased on the premises since the law provides stringent penalties for permitting liquor bought off the premises to be consumed.

Much of their profit in the past has resulted from sale of set-ups. The county does not license sale of liquor by night clubs or restaurants except for one large inn at Olney.

Members of the Liquor Control Board and the police department are studying the new law and methods for enforcing it. The board has decided to have large placards printed for display in county licensed establishments announcing the terms of the law in the hope they will help.

The law provides for revocation of license of any dealer who permits liquor to be drunk on his premises which was not purchased there and also a fine of not more than $1,000 or two years in prison.

It also makes it a misdemeanor for the customer to "spike" ginger ale or other soft drink and prohibits furnishing of beer or liquor to any minor.

Joe Louis Rises From Floor to Knock Out Galento in Fourth Round of Wild Battle

30,000 Fans See Champion Defend Heavyweight Title

Toughest Battle Joe Has Had Since Winning Crown From Braddock; End Comes at 2:29 of Fourth Heat

By Damon Runyon.

Yankee Stadium, New York, June 28.—Fat Tony Galento, described by some realist as "the man who walks like a beer barrel," can now go back to his bar in Orange, N. J., again with a great story to tell his customers for years to come of how he once had had the mighty Joe Louis on the deck for a count of two, a happenstance of the third round tonight.

It is true Tony will also have some additional scars across his flat nose and blubbery lips as a memento of what occurred later, but he can forget them in the glowing recollection of his brief flare of glory, which had 30,000 spectators popeyed with amazement.

Getting up off the seat of his resin-dusty pants, Louis cuts Tony into ribbons in the fourth round, and Referee Arthur Donovan stops the business as Tony is staggering around on his short legs, half-blinded by his own blood. Indeed, he leaves such a pool of gore in his corner that they have to call in a man to mop up the mess so a latter bout can go on.

Dead Game Fighter

Two minutes and 29 seconds of the fourth round have elapsed when Donovan stops it. Tony is a sight to behold. His bulging body, as hairy as a gorilla's, is red with the blood leaking down from his lips and nose and from cuts around his eyes. The wonder is that he is able to stand on his feet as Louis bounces leather off his bruised features.

Still, he keeps his vow to finish gamely. He is standing up taking punches when it is inconceivable that he can see, or that he knows where he is. Called a buffoon and a clown, Tony Galento nonetheless establishes himself as a dead game guy tonight.

He has Louis in more trouble right from the jump than "the Brown Bomber" has experienced in any fight since the night he got knocked out by Max Schmeling in this same ring. Tony moves out on him at the opening bell, crouching away low, and suddenly staggering Louis with a left hook to the chin. Tony gets in close enough to joe to get this punch home by a quick little charge. It looks for an instant as if the great Louis is a goner right there, especially as Galento charges again and lands again.

Carries Fight to Louis

The crowd gets a terrific thrill out of this first round, which must be scored for Galento. In the second, still crouching away low, Tony again carries the fight to Louis, nailing the champion with a right chop to the jaw and hooking him twice in the face with his left, but Joe is steadying himself now and taking good aim at Galento's chubby chin with his deadly left hook.

He knocks Galento down with a right hand to the chin for a count of three.

Joe finds the answer to Tony's crouch in this round. When Tony bends his fat body into a curious lump, Louis reaches over and bangs the Italian on both sides. Tony is in his crouch, or rather bend, in the fourth and he makes a reach for Joe with his right. Louis immediately drops over a terrific right-hand smash to Tony's chin, and that is the beginning of the end, as the saying is. The punch staggers Galento and Louis goes to work on him with both hands, giving him a frightful beating before Donovan intervenes.

They are offering odds of 8 to 1 against Tony as the men enter the ring. The price is as high as 12 at one time. Galento, 29 years old, and often beaten by ordinary fighters, is not figured any sort of a gambling chance against Louis, yet he immediately proves that he is one of the most dangerous opponents the champion ever faced. Most of the men who have fought Louis in the past have "died in the dressing room," as the saying is, meaning their courage curdled before they got in the ring. Galento is at least unafraid.

Punches Appear Weak

Were he able to follow up the staggering of Louis in the first, or again in the third when Louis walks into the left hook to the chin that drops him, Tony Galento might be champion of the world tonight. However, his strength seems to leave him when he tries to press his advantage in subsequent charges. His punches appear to be weak, even when he has Louis against the ropes.

Perhaps this is the lesson the advocates of clean living, and all that sort of thing, will see in the fight. Galento is alleged by his publicists to revel in wassail, and a good time. Louis is said to be abstemious and a keeper of good hours. Thus it might be said that virtue triumphs tonight.

The argument of many prize fight followers, that Louis can be hit and also hurt, is sustained by Galento, however. Joe is perplexed and a little angry as he gets up from the knockdown, which comes at a moment when it looks as if he has Tony all readied up for the finisher.

He is a trifle disturbed by Tony's opening charges. It is a very cautious Louis in there at times tonight.

Tony's much-publicized braggadocio, as evidenced by his calling of all other fighters "bums," is not much on display as he restlessly awaits the introductions tonight. He is deadly serious in his manner and deadly serious in his fighting.

See RUNYON, Page 19, Column 1.

'Careless,' Says Tony, Still Cocky

Blames Himself for Loss to 'Dat Bum;' Seeks Return Bout; He's Tough, Says Joe

By the United Press.

Yankee Stadium, New York, June 28. — Rolly-Poly Tony Galento waited all his life for the opportunity that came his way tonight and then, to quote him:

"I hadda get careless and let dat bum stop me."

The blood still streamed from three cuts on his bulbous face and his eyes, normally just narrow slits, were almost completely closed as Tony sat there in his dressing room and told how it happened. He was still the cocky little Orange N. J., tavern-keeper—still howling for another shot at "dat bum."

"Aw," Tony said with a wave of his ham-like right hand, "he can't hit hardern any of those other bums I fought. Kayo Christner threw 'em in hardern Louis."

Jubilant Despite Defeat

"I had the fight in the bag when whammo, I get careless and he clips me. You know what happened after that. And get this straight—he didn't knock me down in that second round. He just pushed me and I lost my balance."

Despite the defeat, both Galento and his little manager, Joe (Gimmick) Jacobs, were jubilant.

Jacobs pointing to several reporters who picked Louis in one round, screamed:

"Yah, I told youse guys. So you thought Tony would be scared—youse said he'd quit. Guess we showed you plenty tonight, didn't we? Don't ever sell Little Joey short."

Mutters About Eyes

All the while he sat there, Galento kept muttering over and over again, "I can't see . . . I can't see." He kept pawing at his eyes, which were being treated by one of his handlers and steadily was rubbing the antiseptic on the cuts into the eyes themselves.

"I was almost blind out there from the blood," Galento explained. "Otherwise I'da licked him. Why'd the referee stop it?"

And a hundred newspapermen gave Tony the answer: "You're a game guy Tony, but there was no use staying around much longer—especially if you were getting careless.

"But," Galento said, "I won't be careless the next time. I gave the fans a good run for their money and think I'm entitled to a return match. Didn't I knock him down—and didn't I last more than a round "

One of the first persons to greet Tony when he returned from the battle was his plump wife, Mary. She was almost hysterical because a couple of policemen wouldn't let her in the dressing room. They finally convinced her to wait outside—that it was no place for a lady.

Two-Ton Tony Wins Pardon For Bragging

Beer Baron Comes Within Single Blow Of Beating Champ

By Bob Considine.

Yankee Stadium, New York, June 28.—Like the condemned man who, when dropped through the trapdoor, doggedly refused to die, Tony Galento tonight won a full pardon.

So long as he lives and engages in this screwiest of all sports endeavors, no one is going to laugh at him as one laughs at a clown. For, with those two washerwoman fists, he gave Joe Louis one of the most miserable nights of his life, and he gave the crowd that came to hoot at him the greatest thrill a fight mob has had since the night Jack Dempsey came up out of the press box to "murder" Luis Angel Firpo.

Near Galento Victory

Tony was knocked out in the fourth round, but it must be remembered that the fellow who did that successful Brodie through the hangman's trapdoor had a sore neck for a long time. Louis left him draped over the middle rope of the Yankee Stadium ring, bleeding like a great, pulsating wine gourd. But no one ever will question the legality of Tony's reprieve. Nobody is going to laugh at him again, and fools like this one won't be picking him to lose in 11 seconds. For tonight Dominick Anthony Galento, armed with little more than a great heart and a good barroom left, came within a punch or so of beating a great champion.

Burke Bows; Brownell Wins in College Golf

Duke Student Double Victor in Nationals At Des Moines; Burke Loses in Second Round; Ray Higgins, Otto Greiner Beaten

By the Associated Press.

Des Moines, Iowa, June 28.—Defending champion John P. Burke, of Georgetown, could not match the par pace of John Hayes, Marquette, in the National Intercollegiate Golf Championship here today over the Wakonda course and bowed out in a second round upset, 2 and 1.

Burke scored a first-round triumph over Stanley Kowal, Michigan State, by a 2 and 1 margin, after Kowall attempted to hurdle a stymie on the fourteenth hole and knocked Burke's ball in the cup, the turning point of the match.

Meanwhile Bobby Brownell, Duke University student and top-ranking golfer from the Nation's Capital, advanced with two impressive victories to the round of 16.

Brownell Has 75

Brownell dropped a 25-foot birdie putt on the final hole of the morning round to defeat John Selby, Princton, 2 up, with a medal score of 75. The winner was up from the eighth hole to the sixteenth, where Selby squared the match, but the latter lost the next two holes.

In the afternoon the Duke junior trounced J. Ward Fourth, Texas, by a 5 and 4 margin after leading 6 up at the ninth hole. Brownell was out in a sub-par 35, and won easily.

Hayes was two up on Burke at the ninth hole, with a 35, and went three up and four to play on the back nine. They halved the fifteenth, Burke kept the match alive with a three on the sixteenth but a halve in pars ended the battle on the seventeenth in Hayes' favor.

Ray Higgins, a teammate of Burke's from Georgetown, defeated William Cooper, Minneapolis, by a 4 and 3 margin in the first round but lost on the nineteenth in the afternoon to H. R. Merritt, of Yale.

Greiner Beaten

Meanwhile medalist Sid Richardson, Northwestern, lost in the first round to Art Floberg, Beloit, 4 and 3. Neil Croonquist, Minnesota, turned in the hottest round of the day, a 69, as he defeated Billy Cordingley, Harvard, 4 and 2, in the second round. The winner was out in 31, 5 under par.

Stewart Alexander, Duke University captain, won over Iowa's Jim Hoak in the second round, 2 up, while other second-round victors were: Rennie Kelly, Southern California; Lee Ramsel, L. S. U.; William Hall, Iowa State; Vincent D'Antoni, Tulane; Tom Hoak, Iowa State; Bert McDowell, L. S. U.; Warren Berl, Stanford, and Don Kennedy, Stanford.

Description Of Battle By Rounds

FIRST ROUND

Galento came out in a crouch and both sparred. Galento landed a light left to ear as he charged in.

Louis tapped Tony twice. Galento landed three hard lefts to the Louis chin in a neutral corner and the champion held on.

Louis bounced a right off the challenger's forehead. Galento connected with lefts to the body and eye.

THIRD ROUND

FOURTH ROUND

Tony charged in and the champion clinched. Louis landed two light lefts. Tony smashed a left to the side of the face and in close mauled the champion.

Louis landed a left but was short with a right. A short left hand hit Tony on the mouth and another opened a cut there.

Joe shot left and right to the face and Tony was hurt. Tony landed a light left and then caught three rights to his face which had him staggering badly.

Louis backed Tony against the ropes and hit him with both hands at will. He shot lefts and rights to the face and Galento fell away from the ropes and dropped to his knees helpless, hanging on to the referee in his own corner as Louis won by a technical knockout in 3 minutes 29 seconds of the fourth round.

Earle Skinker Wins District Junior Medal

Columbia Champion Has 74 at Army-Navy For 4 Stroke Margin

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Earle Skinker proved he's just about the best mudder in town among the younger golfers by winning medal honors in the District junior championship yesterday at Army and Navy with a 2 over par 74, despite the morning downpour.

The 17-year-old Columbia Club junior champion recently won the medal in the metropolitan scholastic championship at Kenwood, playing through one of the hardest rains of the season.

Skinker played the first nine in 39, 4 over par, dropping the strokes with a flubbed iron shot and three putts. He went over on the tenth, but from there in he played the hilly layout in 3 under par for the incoming 35 and 74. He birdied the par 5 thirteenth and fifteenth holes with 10 and 6 foot putts and on the seventeenth dropped his second shot within inches of the cup for an easy birdie, his third in five holes.

Ross Bags Down

David "Scotty" Ross, favored to meet Skinker in the finals, looked like the medalist for 11 holes, going out in 37 and starting back with a par and birdie, but he hit two double bogeys in succession and finished with a 41 and 78. The only other 80-breakers were Jimmy Stevens, tournament finalist from the host club two years ago, with a pair of 39's, and Norman Rehkopf, a clubmate.

Buster Marstek, who won the 15-and-under age class in the Maryland Junior Championship on Tuesday with two fine rounds at Woodmont, failed to make the championship flight with a 93, while Frank Williamson finished with a 92 and out of the running for the title.

Willett Scores 82

George Vass, jr., and Tom Fitzgerald, a strong entry from Kenwood, were tied at 81 with Bill Cassidy, Argyle, while Carroll Willett, schoolboy semifinalist, had 82 and Ben Hartig, Columbia, 83, with the best comeback of the day, 46-37 for an 83.

Skinker and Ross, in the opposite halves of the draw, meet Dick Burgess and Jimmy Brantley, respectively, in the first round this morning. The finals are scheduled tomorrow afternoon.

9:30—Earle Skinker, Columbia (74) vs. Dick Burgess, Army and Navy (85); 9:35—Billy Cassedy, Argyle (81) vs. Jack Call, Capital (88); 9:40—George Vass, jr., Kenwood (81) vs. J. L. Lefty Poland Hurls Ninth for Staunton

Staunton, Va., June 28 (AP).—Lefty Walter Poland narrowly missed a shutout last night as he won his ninth consecutive game for the Staunton Presidents, whipping the Salem-Roanoke club, 6 to 1.

The Salem Friends pushed over their lone tally in the ninth inning after Poland walked a man and allowed a fluke infield hit.

Brooklyn, N. Y., 1933—

The Dodgers and the Braves are in the tenth inning, and Manager Max Carey scans the Brooklyn bench for a pinch hitter.

"Where's Louie?"

It was his pet name for paunchy Louis (Hack) Wilson, back-sliding home run champion of the National League who in the sunset of his career had caught on with the Brooklyn club.

"Somebody find Louie," demanded Carey, "I want him to hit."

POVICH

First Baseman Joe Judge had an idea of Hack's whereabouts. He dashed down the dugout steps, ran to the dressing room and spied Wilson sitting on his locker. "Quick, Hack, Carey wants you to hit," Judge shouted.

Without a word, Hack languidly rose to his feet and with his duck-waddle stride started up the steps to the dugout.

And then Judge took in the situation in the dressing room. In Wilson's locker, and strewed about the floor were a dozen dead soldiers, more or less. Judge gathered up 14 empty beer bottles by actual count, sought a place to hide them before Manager Carey returned to the dressing room.

It was little enough to do for a friend. Judge had always liked Hack Wilson. He knew Louie would catch it from Carey if the empties were found lying about. He heaved all 14 bottles into the big galvanized clothes drier, carefully out of sight, and with a sigh of relief started to make his way back to the dugout.

Starting to ascend the steps, Judge was almost floored by a parade of Brooklyn players heading back to the dressing room.

"Game over?" asked Judge.

"Yep. Hack just parked one over the leftfield wall with two on."

Langford Calls the Round

Juarez, Mexico, 1924—

Old Sam Langford, nearing his fifties, is still campaigning as a heavyweight. He is fighting for paltry purses that didn't represent training expenses when he was Jack Johnson's chief challenger for the title. Jimmy Erwin is managing him, has him booked to fight The Tiger, a New Orleans black man.

With a great fanfare, The Tiger had been training at Juarez for two weeks. He has boasted how he would knock out "dat old Langford." He appeared able to do it. A remarkable physical specimen, fresh off the New Orleans docks, The Tiger outweighed Langford by 50 pounds.

And for six rounds he was beating old Sam, a one-eyed fighter by that time. Erwin, in Langford's corner, told Sam to let his right hand go as the bell started the seventh round.

Langford advanced across the ring, extended both gloves toward The Tiger as if to shake hands.

"What fo' you shake hands?" demanded The Tiger. "Dis ain't de last round."

"Dass what you think," said Sam, and crossing his right to The Tiger's chin, he knocked the big fellow senseless in mid-ring.

Langford watched as the referee counted ten, and then clamly sat in his corner as The Tiger's seconds, two little fellows, vainly attempted to drag the big hulk of a man back to his stool.

They were making no progress with the big, inert mass, and Old Sam finally sauntered over to mid-ring again.

"Ah'll tell you what you do," said Sam. "Iffen you want to get him on dat stool, you go over and get dat stool and bring it over here."

About the Galloping Ghost

Jacksonville, Fla., 1926—

The Galloping Ghost has quit the University of Illinois at the end of the football season, kissing off his chances of graduating for his plunge into professional football. Red Grange wants the ready money they had promised him as a pro player.

He was getting it, too. HeH had packed 80,000 fans into Lankee Stadium for an All-Star game, had played to 50,000 at Wrigley Field, Chicago. Within a month he had $100,000 in the bank and the Red Grange All-Stars were still the country's biggest attraction.

The late C. C. Pyle took Grange and the team on a Southern barnstorming trip, playing to 15,000 in Washington, 20,000 in Atlanta. The Jacksonville game held promise of another big gate. Grange and his club were to play a collection of Southern All-Stars.

On that Southern All-Star team was another redhead—the Red Grange of his day. He was "Red" Barron, famed backfield ace of Georgia Tech, playing against Grange merely for the fun of it, simply to satisfy himself that Grange was a great football player.

Playing safety man for the Southerners, Red Barron saw Grange break loose on his own 20-yard line, skip through tackle with his famed hip movement, shake off the immediate secondary defense with his change of pace, and head for the goal.

Two blockers were between Red Grange and Red Barron, the last defender. Grange cannily stayed behind them as first one blocker, then the second, attempted to mow Barron down. He sidestepped both, hauled Grange down from behind with a tackle that shook Grange's dental work.

For a moment Grange appeared stunned. He lay motionless and Promoter Pyle dashed out on the field, upbraiding Barron for his rough tackle. Pyle saw his half-million dollar investment vanishing.

And then Grange stirred himself, advanced toward Barron. The Georgia Redhead put up his fists, ready for any eventuality.

Gene Smith Beats Menzel at Wimbledon

By the Associated Press.

Wimbledon, England, June 28.—Gene Smith, an amiable Berkeley (Calif.) high school English teacher who came over here to look at cathedrals, blasted Germany's gigantic Roderich Menzel, the seventh ranking player in the world, right off Wimbledon's slippery turf today in one of the biggest upsets of this international tennis season.

Entered somewhat obscurely as "E. Smith, U. S. A.," the Californian produced a magnificent, kicking service which had the German jumping and fanning the air all afternoon. Smith won, 6—1, 3—6, 6—3, 7—5, to go into the third round, and his victory almost made up for the surprise defeat of Don McNeill, of Oklahoma City.

Recent winner of the French championship and seeded third largely on the strength of that, McNeill skidded all over the rain-soaked center court against Franz Kukuljevic, of Yugoslavia, and finally slipped right out of the tournament. The scores were 6—4, 7—5, 6—1.

Unranked in U. S.

Smith isn't even ranked in the United States. He spends most of the year telling kids at Piedmont (Calif.) High School why Hamlet killed the king, and the rest of the time he does graduate work at the University of California and travels.

"That's actually what I'm doing over here now," said the beaming Westerner tonight. "I just came over to look at old buildings and I happened to be playing well today."

Just the same, "E. Smith, U. S. A." was giving lessons to Menzel out there this afternoon and those who remember that he beat Australia's Adrian Quist in a Pacific Coast tournament last year expect him to beat a few more before he's through.

Another Californian, Gracyn Wheeler, of Santa Monica, scored an upset by defeating Mrs. Ronald Ellis, 6—3, 7—5. Gracyn had her superb drop-shot working to per-

Andy Gibson And Overton Win Pro-Am

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Baltimore, June 28.—Andy Gibson, Bonnie View professional, and Spencer Overton, Rolling Road amateur, won the Maryland State Golf Association's pro-amateur tournament here today at Five Farms with a best ball 63. Gibson and E. G. Barnes, Rolling Road, had 65 and Gibson and Edgar Lucas, of the host club, 66, for the first three prizes.

A small Washington delegation was led by Al Jamison, Indian Spring professional, and Arthur Urban, with a best ball 67. Jamison had a 72 and Urban helped five strokes. Jamison and Dr. A. T. Utz had 68 and Jamison and Earl Clary 69.

George Diffenbaugh, Kenwood, and his three partners, J. W. Harvey, C. D. Johanson and W. O. Woolley had no card. Harvey scored 82-7, 75, in the handicap play.

Overton, Nathan Kaufman, Suburban, and Jerry Goodman, Woodholme, all tied for low amateur prize in Class A, with 67. Overton was one under par with a 69, minus a 2 handicap.

Yanks' 13 Homers Set Record as A's Lose, 23-2 and 10-0

Champions Get Eight In Opener

N. Y.'s 53 Total Bases On 27 Hits in Opener Snaps Old A. L. Mark Of 50 Set in 1932

By the Associated Press.

Philadelphia, June 28.—In a record-breaking home run spree, the world champion New York Yankees put together 13 round-trip tickets today to swamp the Philadelphia Athletics, 23 to 2 and 10 to 0, in both ends of a double-header.

Eight of the Yankees' homers came in the first game, breaking the mark of seven which had stood since 1886 with only a handful of ties. The five circuit clouts in the nightcap broke the major league record for the most homers in two consecutive games, which the Yankees of 1936 had set at 11.

The champions made 53 total bases on their 27 hits in the first game to break their own American League mark of 50 set in 1932, but fell two short of the National League high set by Cincinnati in 1893. Held hitless in the last two innings, the Bronx Bombers barely missed several other records.

This bombardment overshadowed the pitching feats of Monte Pearson and Lefty Gomez. The former scattered seven safeties in the first game, while Gomez was at his peak in the three-hit shutout second game in which he gave only one base on balls.

The home run barrage was led by Babe Dahlgren, Joe DiMaggio and Joe Gordon with three apiece, while Bill Dickey, George Selkirk, Tommy Henrich and Frank Crosetti joined in with one each.

Dahlgren, who once lost a job as regular first baseman of the Boston Red Sox because they hired Jimmy Foxx, and got splinters riding the Yankee bench until Lou Gehrig retired last month, had the honor of setting the new records.

In the first game, after hitting one in the third with a mate aboard, he notched the eighth and final home run with two on in the seventh. In the second game he hit another with one on in the ninth to improve upon the record Gordon's blow brought in the fifth.

The original home run record of seven in a single game was made by Detroit against St. Louis in the National League. Since then it had been tied five times, including the circus the New York Giants staged last June 6 against the Cincinnati Reds.

Honey Cloud Equals Mark At Delaware

By the Associated Press.

Delaware Park, June 28.—Honey Cloud, in a form reversal, for Mrs. A. J. Abel stunned the patrons here today when he won the grade "A" Handicap at 1 mile and a furlong. Last in the field of seven that he met in the Powder House Handicap here on Saturday, the son of High Cloud led his opponents throughout today's encounter to equal the track record of 1:52 and pay $42.10. Opposed to the winner were seven eligibles for the Sussex Handicap, $10,000 added feature to be offered here next Saturday. Honey Cloud is also nominated for this special. Jockey R. Scott had the mount on today's surprise winner. He had previously ridden French Trap to victory in the second race.

Honey Cloud had speed to take command immediately after the start and when clear in front he was taken in hand as he sped along before Arabs Arrow and Rex Flag. Scott handled his charge confidently and Arabs Arrow wilted as the leader moved away entering the stretch. Meanwhile, Nedayr had gradually bettered his position and the Kilmer representative closed stoutly to force the winner to extend himself to the limit to earn a half-length verdict. Roseretter was third two lengths away.

Here They Are—Yankees' Home Run Record Sextet

Yankees, Nats Play 2 Games Here Today

Harris Picks Alexandra, Leonard to Pitch; Case Out With Injury

Flashing storm warnings toward Griffith Stadium with a barrage of 13 home runs in Philadelphia yesterday, the New York (break up the) Yankees move in on the Nats today.

Bearing their new record of eight home runs in a single game, the Yanks will open their series with the Nats with a double-header, starting at 1:30 p. m. and finishing who knows when?

They will have ample incentive to beat the Washington club because, paradoxically, the seventh-place Nats are the only club in the league which has whipped the Yankees in a majority of their games thus far. In the five battles between the clubs this season, the Nats have won three.

Alexandra, Leonard Hurl

Manager Bucky Harris will attempt to beat the Yankees today with Alex Alexandra and Dutch Leonard, reserving his left-handers, Ken Chase and Joe Krakauskas for future service against the New Yorkers.

The Yankees will be making their first appearance at Griffith Stadium since mid-April. At that time they beat Leonard, but the Venezuelan, Alexandra, has twice turned them back in relief roles. It will be his first starting performance against the New York club.

As the Yankees move into Washington, the scene will present the heaviest hitting club in all history against a team that in its last two games has not scored a run. When the Red Sox handed the Nats two consecutive defeats earlier in the week before yesterday's game was rained out, they completed 19 scoreless innings for the Nats. The Nats, in fact, have scored only two runs in their last 25 innings of play.

Case On Injured List

There is no comfort for Manager Bucky Harris, either, in the current situation which finds Outfielder George Case lost to the club for a few days. Case, who injured his leg when he tumbled over first base in an attempt to beat out a hit on Tuesday, will not be in the line-up during the Yankee series. His absence detracts a .330 batting average from the Nats' attack.

There is no comfort for Harris, either, in the prospect that the Yankees will toss their two top pitchers, Red Ruffing and Atlee Donald at the Nats today. Ruffing, already winner of 12 games, has always been a master of the Nats, and Rookie Donald has won eight straight games without a defeat.

Advance sales indicate that today's twin bill will draw the largest weekday crowd of the season at Griffith Stadium.

Cards Rout Diz Dean But Cubs Win, 8-4

Five Hits and Sacrifice in First Inning Send Ex-St. Louis Pitcher To Showers; Hack and Hartnett Homer

By the Associated Press.

St. Louis, June 28.—Dizzy Dean's heralded pitching appearance at Sportsman Park for the first time since he changed into Cub livery was a personal flop today, but his mates came from behind to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals, 8 to 4.

Five hits and a sacrifice fly by the Cardinals drove their former ace pitcher from the game before one inning had been completed and until the seventh it appeared as though old Diz was to be charged with his first defeat of the season.

But in that inning Stanley Hack hit a home run, Billy Herman doubled and Augie Galan singled Herman home with the tying run.

In the eighth Manager Gabby Hartnett of the Cubs hit his seventh homer of the season for enough margin, as it turned out, to win. But Chicago tallied three more times off Bill McGee in the ninth. McGee, who entered the game in the eighth, was the losing pitcher.

By losing, the Cardinals turned over second place in the league race to the fast-stepping New York Giants, but remained two full games ahead of the fourth-place Cubs.

The quick retirement of Dizzy was as follows: Jimmy Brown grounded out to Glen Russell. Stuart Martin singled to right, Terry Moore doubled Martin to third and Johnny Mize's sacrifice fly scored Martin. Joe Medwick's double to center drove in Moore and Enos Slaughter's single sent Medwick home. After Mickey Owen's single, Dizzy was jerked.

Twilight Races Begin Today At Latonia

57-Year-Old Plant Opens 27-Day Meet; First Race at 4:30 P. M.

By the Associated Press.

Latonia, Ky., June 28.—Bowing to a demand for greater patronage, 57-year-old Latonia "goes modern" tomorrow with a program of twilight racing.

Eleven horses were named for the Latonia Inaugural, 1 1/16-biles feature of the card, first of a 27-day meet.

Col. Matt J. Winn, president of Churchill Downs-Latonia, Inc., was on hand—with scarcely a thought that on Friday he will observe his seventy-eighth birthday. Decision to launch the twilight program resulted from increased attendance at Detroit and Cleveland, he said.

Post time for the race will be 4:30 p. m. (E. S. T.), and the last race should be over by 7:30 o'clock. Lights have been installed around the clubhouse and the dining room enlarged to accommodate patrons who remain for the evening meal.

Twilight racing was started as an experiment at Thistledown, near Cleveland, last year, and North Randall followed.

For the inaugural feature, Dixiana Stable's Torchy became the overnight favorite on the basis of two workouts of 1:43 and 1:42, although Trainer Clyde Van Dusen still sought a capable rider.

Others not without their backers included M. J. Schmidt's Sortie Star, "Rome" Respess, Busy Morn and Frank Letellier's Southland Beau. Ernie Hanke, leading apprentice rider at Lincoln Fields, who is under contract to Letellier, had several mounts carded for the first-day program.

Foxx, With Doctor, Entrains for Boston

Attended by a physician, Jimmy Foxx entrained for Boston yesterday with the prospect that he would not be able to rejoin the Red Sox line-up for a week.

Foxx departed with the Boston team, which took an early train following postponement of yesterday's scheduled contest due to rain. The slugging first baseman was suffering from a severe cold and sinus and running a temperature of 102.

Reds-Bucs Night Game Postponed

Cincinnati, June 28 (INS).—The National League night game between Pittsburgh and Cincinnati was postponed tonight because of rain after the umpires had waited until 10:30 p. m. (E. D. T.) for the downpour to let up.

Dodgers Beat Bees, 6-1, as Hamlin Hurls

Gene Moore Leads Brooklyn Attack With Two Singles

By the Associated Press.

Boston, June 28.—Taking no chances on a repetition of yesterday's 23-inning deadlock, the Brooklyn Dodgers lashed out with four runs in the fourth inning today and ultimately raised it to a 6-to-1 victory over the Boston Bees.

Luke (Hot Potato) Hamlin pitched a steady 7-hit game. He lost a shutout when the Bees scored their first run in 29 innings in the eighth on three successive singles.

Gene Moore led the Dodgers' attack with two singles, good for two runs and two runs batted in. A walk and five singles accounted for the fourth inning cluster.

Mother Offers Her Son's Blood For Gehrig's Cure

Manchester, N. H., June 28 (AP).—Prompted by the same sympathy that has swept the Nation for Lou Gehrig, a 37-year-old Manchester mother today sent an airmail letter to the stricken captain of the New York Yankees, offering the blood of her 14-year-old son, who, nine years ago, conquered the same disease that has attacked Gehrig.

In addition to this offer, the mother, Mrs. Mary Desaulniers, expressed willingness to go to Boston over the week-end, when the New York club comes there to play the Red Sox, to meet Gehrig and his physician and tell him of the diet that cured her boy, Robert.

Stricken with muscular atrophy (hardening of the muscles) when he was 5 years old, Robert effected a cure his mother asserted, on a diet of raw vegetables, particularly potatoes, carrots, turnips and tomatoes. In four months he had returned to normal, she added.

Tunney, Dempsey May Umpire Here

Gene Tunney and Jack Dempsey, principals in one of the greatest heavyweight championship boxing bouts of all time, may team up as umpires at Griffith Stadium a week from today, July 6, when the Congressional softball team opposed a picked line-up of newspaper men for the benefit of the National Library for the Blind.

Already having been guaranteed Tunney's appearance here by the retired, undefeated heavyweight champion himself, Promoter Al Stern yesterday wired Jack Dempsey an invitation to serve as base umpire.

Nanjo Singh Will 'Offer' $500 To 'Cobra Clutch' Breakers

The line will please form on the right. Nanjo Singh, Hindu wrestling gentleman, yesterday informed Promoter Joe Turner he will "offer $500" to any man who can break away from his "cobra deathlock." Nanjo can be found tonight at Turner's Arena, practicing said clutch on Laverne Baxter.

This unprecedented offer came after Laverne protested that the "cobra clutch" is just a strangle hold in disguise. Furthermore, Laverne demanded Promoter Turner bar the hold as he is in no mood to be tied up pretzel fashion.

"I cannot understand how Promoter Turner can allow this thing to be used," brooded the North Carolina wrestling villain. "It ain't legal."

Nanjo, however, has a sentimental regard for his favorite clutch, it was said, as it actually is an invention of his father, who sat down in his native Paldi of the Punjab and thought it up. It seems that a cobra at play under the elder Singh's window gave him the idea.

At any rate, Nanjo's offer furnishes a golden opportunity for the ringside hecklers. Promoter Turner pointed out that the clutch applies pressure to the victim's throat regions and chest by use of arms and elbows but not with the hands and, therefore, is more or less legal.

Lending support to the Singh-Baxter opus will be several Grade B groan artists. Jack Hader will clash with King Kong Symkowski in the semifinal, and preliminaries will bring together Bibber McCoy and Hank Metheny, Jim Clinstock and Jules Strongbow and George Tragas and Pete Managoff. First bout is at 8:30 p. m.

Hostak, Apostoli May Finally Settle 'Middle' Tangle

Seattle, June 28 (AP).—The two currently reigning middleweight boxing champions may battle each other for the championship one of these days.

Al Hostak, of Seattle, who regained his middleweight title—recognized by the National Boxing Association—last night from Solly Krieger, of Brooklyn, said today he wants to fight Freddie Apostoli, recognized as the champion by the boxing commissions of New York and California.

Nate Druxman, who promoted the Hostak-Krieger fight last night, indicated he would try to promote Hostak's first title defense, possibly here in August, against the winner of the Apostoli-Ceferino Garcia bout, July 27, in New York City.

Farmington Horse Show October 6-7

F. Ambrose Clark Invited to Act As Judge at Show

Special Dispatch to The Post

Charlottesville, Va., June 22.—The horse show committee of the Farmington Hunt Club, composed of Mrs. J. P. Jones and Rodger R. Rinehart, joint masters; Howard Y. Haffner, Robert H. Schlesinger and Llewellyn Miller, met last night and decided to hold a two-day show this year, for the first time in the history of the organization. The dates set are October 6 and 7.

It was the unanimous opinion of the committee that the breeding classes be expanded, as well as those for farm teams. One or more saddle classes will be shown on each day of the show.

F. Ambrose Clark, of Westbury, Long Island; W. Brock Fuller, of Milwaukee, and Edward H. Carle, of Smithtown Branch, Long Island, have been invited to act as judges at the two-day exhibition.

10-Mile Street Race Carded For July 10

D. C. Playgrounds Event To Draw Entries From At Least Five States

Plans for the eleventh annual running of the Department of Playgrounds-Takoma Park Citizens Fourth of July 10-mile street race were announced yesterday with the announcement that entries have been received from Maryland, New York, Pennsylvania, Delaware, Virginia and the District.

Capt. Patrick J. Carroll, of the U. S. Park Police, will fire the starting gun at Gravelly Point on Mount Vernon boulevard, at 1:30 p. m. The runners will jog up to Thirteenth street, out Thirteenth to Van Buren and thence to Takoma Park Playground.

Joseph Kleinerman, of the St. Anslem Athletic Association, Pelham Manor, New York, is defending champion. Bill Agee, of Baltimore, six times a winner of the race, will also enter. A former national 15-mile champion, Agee was forced out of the District race last year at the 7-mile mark.

Takoma Park citizens are providing trophies for the first six runners and medals for all finishers, Dick Tennyson, assistant supervisor of playgrounds, announced.

The District A. A. U., sanctioning the run, will award first, second and third place medals designating the District championship. After the last man finishes the street run the Takoma citizens will stage a track and field meet. Contestants in the marathon will meet July 4 at 11 a. m. at the District Building.

The race committee, headed by Tennyson, includes Harry G. Helme, assistant director; Ralph E. Harriss and C. J. Bride, Takoma Park citizens; James Springman, Yank Robbins, Jerry Looney, A. A. U.; Max Farrington, G. W. Unversity; Dave Adamson and Dr. Phil Degnan.

Time Her, With W. Kirk Up, Wins Feature at Charles Town

Harris Filly Pays $15.60 Mutuel Price

Covers 4½ Furlongs In .51, Two Seconds Short of Record On Slow Track

By Walter Haight

Charles Town, W. Va., June 28.—J. T. Harris, of Fredericksburg, Va., the city where George Washington tossed the silver dollar over the Rappahannock River, saddled his Time Her here today and the 3-year-old filly went out to show her heels to the best short-distance sprinters on the grounds in the Speed Handicap, outstanding event on the mid-week program. The daughter of Time Maker, carrying only 105 pounds in the person of energetic jockey Woodrow Kirk, crossed the finish line a length in front of a photo finish for second money in which M. Lobeck's Chaste, a newcomer, nosed out W. Royle's Lady Buck.

As the result of morning rains, the track was slow and Time Her, a fleet daughter of Time Maker and Dunworkin, was clocked in 0:51 for the 4½ furlongs, two seconds over the track record set here two years ago by Irene's Bob which carried 122 pounds.

Money showed from the start of the betting on Time Her and the filly paid a $15.60 mutuel.

Enthusiasm showed in front briefly before Kirk sent Time Her to the top. He hustled the filly along and she was accompanied by Lady Buck on the swing to the stretch. In the straightaway, Time Her shook off her rival to open a clear lead which she maintained to the wire. Chaste, a maiden which has shown little or nothing in New York racing, came with a mighty rush from far back to take the place money.

The race saw the defeat of Tavern, Consistent, Cats Cradle and others prominent in sprinting company during the meeting. Tavern and Consistent had rough trips.

Those in the crowd of 5,000 who played the "4 and 1" combination of Trivet and Small Change, collected a $21.60 daily double.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—ELAMP, $25.60, $14.60, $11.20; BROWN CHAIN, $34.40, $16.20. SAIL BY, $3.60.

ELAMP, within striking distance from start, responded gamely when placed to drive to take command and drew clear in closing stages. BROWN CHAIN, last away, went forwardly along backstretch, came through on inside entering stretch while improving position sharply and hung in final drive. SAIL BY was hard ridden and closed gamely. ASTER PRINCESS was used up setting and forcing pace with TIMETTA. FLAG ETTA could not keep up. TIMETTA was hard ridden to get to front and weakened badly.

WEATHER, CLOUDY. TRACK, SLOW.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TRIVET, $5.40, $4.60, $3.60; MR. MEX, $8.80, $6.40; SUN TEMPEST, $5.20.

TRIVET, forwardly placed from start, went to lead boldly along backstretch and drew out gradually while kept to drive to end. MR. MEX, taken up repeatedly while racing on inside, came willingly at end, but was no match for winner. SUN TEMPEST set early pace and lugged in, tiring at end. TELL IT could not get to front going to turn and weakened. LILTEEN could not keep up.

THIRD RACE—Charles Town course. Purse, $400; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36. Off 3:39. Winner, B. Bond's b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SMALL CHANGE, $8.80, $5.00, $3.40; BROKEN RHYTHM, $10.00, $5.20; NIGHT PLAY, $3.20.

SMALL CHANGE, steadied along within striking distance of leaders, was shaken up approaching stretch and responded to good handling to win under drive. BROKEN RHYTHM, slow to begin, made up ground gradually and closed full of run. NIGHT PLAY raced BLUE PRELUDE into submission and weakened in closing test. BLUE PRELUDE set early pace, but could not stay. DOLLED UP was shuffled back going to turn, moved up and then tired. MISS CHICRO had one run and weakened badly. BORO POKER was not a factor.

Daily Double, Trivet and Small Change, Paid $21.60.

FOURTH RACE—About 7 furlongs. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:05. Off 4:10. Winner, Paragon Stable's blk. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—SHUCHOR, $7.20, $4.40, $3.20; BEAUFAST, $5.40, $3.60; GREEN WATER, $3.80.

SHUCHOR, sent to top in opening furlong, drew out and was kept to drive to end. BEAUFAST saved ground when unable to get to leaders in early stages, went through on inside approaching far turn and was second best. GREEN WATER, steadied going to backstretch, came with good energy in closing sixteenth. WHITE SWEETS was forward factor to stretch and tired. PEGADETTE had early speed. BET WICK could not keep up. FREE RIDE did not appear to like the going and was pulled up.

FIFTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 4:35. Off 4:37. Winner, E. A. Rost's b. c. (6), by Noah—Bargain Day. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BARGAIN BOY, $11.80, $4.20, $2.80. HAPPY ROAD, $3.00, $2.80. DUN LUCKY, $4.80.

BARGAIN BOY, in first flight from start, worked way to leader entering stretch and under strong handling disposed of HAPPY ROAD in final 50 yards. HAPPY ROAD, rated while running with DUN LUCKY in early stages, drew clear, but could not reach winner while under intermittent punishment. DUN LUCKY forced early pace, but weakened gradually during last three-eighths. FLASHING STEEL could not reach serious contention. UPPER BERTH was not a factor. LADY'S FAVOR was through early.

SIXTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $800. For 3-year-olds and upward. The Speed Handicap. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:02. Off 5:06. Winner, J. T. Harris' ch. g. †Horst and Nicodemus entry.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TIME HER, $15.60, $10.20, $7.40; CHASTE, $25.20, $13.60; LADY BUCK, $5.20.

TIME HER, off alertly, opened a good lead, withstood challenges of LADY BUCK and held on gamely under good handling. CHASTE, slow to begin, came with rush through stretch to be going fastest of all. LADY BUCK was close up from start, went to outside of leader with good speed, but weakened right at end. CAT'S CRADLE was well placed on inside from beginning, but was held safe in closing test. TAVERN was off in tangle and tired from hustling tactics while between horses. CONSISTENT was shuffled back to last and failed to rally. ENTHUSIASM could not keep up.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $400. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:35½. Off 5:37. Winner, S. C. Bailey's ch. g. (6), by Donnacosma—Blink. Trained by J. O. Davis. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:57 3-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HUPPY, $13.20, $5.20, $3.40; SCOUT ROSE, $7.60, $5.20; LUCKY TURN, $6.00.

HUPPY, forward factor from start, was driven into lead approaching far turn, withstood challenge of SEA FINN and drew out at end. SCOUT ROSE raced on inside, was squeezed back leaving backstretch and came with good energy in closing stages. LUCKY TURN, pinched back badly soon after start, circled horses to reach contention and hung in final sixteenth. SEA FINN moved up boldly after being badly outrun in early stages, but tired suddenly. MINNA could not reach contention. LAPIS set early pace and tired.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $400; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good. Won ridden out; place driving. Went to post 6:00. Off 6:02½. Winner, J. Sachs' ch. m. (5), by Blind Play—Heartache. Trained by C. Sachs. Value to winner, $300; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:51.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HEART PLAY, $7.20, $4.60, $3.40; LYNX EYE, $9.00, $6.60; FAMOUS CLAYTON, $3.40.

HEART PLAY, within striking distance from start, took command swinging for stretch and drew out, but was kept to hard drive to finish despite long lead. LYNX EYE could not keep up in early stages, rallied when placed to drive and was best of others. FAMOUS CLAYTON, slow to begin, hung after improving position. CUSTER closed some ground. LIGHT ACTION weakened. CHATTERDOO was through early.

Estrella Wins 461-Mile Sailing Race on Corrected Time

43-Foot Yawl 6th to Cross Finish Line

Mandoo II, First To Finish, Is 5th On Corrected Time; Silvana Is Second

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., June 28.—The 43-foot yawl Estrella, owned by Edward Bradford, jr., of Longmeadow, Mass., was declared the winner today of the 461-mile New London-Annapolis sailing race with a corrected time of 66 hours 6 minutes and 30 seconds.

The Estrella crossed the finish line off the Annapolis Yacht Club at 10:28 o'clock last night, the sixth of the 14 starters to complete the run. Her elapsed time was 78 hours 19 minutes and 11 seconds and her handicap 12 hours 14 minutes 41 seconds.

Second was the Silvana, 53-foot cutter owned by K. B. Noble, of Hartford, Conn., which finished at 7:15 o'clock last night after a run of 75 hours 6 minutes 10 seconds. Her corrected time was 66 hours 14 minutes 3 seconds.

The 71-foot yawl, Mandoo II, owned by J. Spencer Berger, of New Haven, Conn., which was the first across the finish line at 2:10 p. m. yesterday, was the class A winner, although only fifth in the race on corrected time. Estrella was the class B winner.

1—Estrella, Edward Bradford, jr., Longmeadow, Mass.; elapsed time, 78:19:11; corrected time, 66:6:30.

Galento Stopped By Louis in 4th

Nor is he as rough and ruthless as some were led to expect. He fights a clean, fair fight.

Louis seems to be still a little peeved after the battle, remarking of Galento that he cannot punch as hard as O.K. Christner, though that is no disparagement, as Christner was once a good puncher. Galento says the usual thing expected of the beaten man—that he wants to fight Joe again.

The third engagement developed into an excellent scrap between two fast, tough, hard-hitting youngsters. Willie Pavlovich, 174½, Brooklyn, was awarded the decision over his game opponent, Danny Temple, 175½, Detroit.

A rough estimate at this time indicated that the crowd exceeded 45,000, indicating a gate of more than $350,000.

Clouds were moving in slowly with the breeze as the second four-round preliminary, bringing together Monte Marks, 190½, Troy, N. Y., and Ralph Ivins, 188, Jamesburg, N. J., got under way. The threat of rain appeared vague, however, and the temperature remained mild.

Marks was awarded the decision over Ivins after four rounds packed with action. There were no knockdowns and neither man was in serious trouble at any time.

Tony Still Calls Louis 'Dat Bum'

the hall, the usual icy calm prevailed—the same chill that has been evident in that same room every time Joe has returned there since that disastrous night in June, 1936, when Max Schmeling beat him in this park.

Joe sat on the table and answered questions almost as routinely as that mechanical man they have at the World's Fair.

"I was throwing a left hook to his belly and off balance when he clipped me with that left hook to the jaw that floored me in the third," he said.

"I wasn't hurt, and that's the reason I got up without taking a count. He's as tough as they come, all right, and he can punch, too.

"He fought a little against the rules, and gave me his head a couple of times, but it didn't bother me. He got in one good uppercut with the back of his hand, too. I never hit a man any hairder to knock him out."

Asked about his future plans, Joe said he expects to defend the title again in September, probably against young Lou Nova, of Alameda, Calif., but that he wouldn't know positively until after his managers talk to Promoter Mik Jacobs tomorrow.

Baering Down

By Arthur "Bugs" Baer.

We don't see how Vermont can join the silver States unless it counts spoons and napkin rings.

But Vermont voted with Arizona on devaluation and its by-products. The political Indians jumped the monetary reservation in an effort to stop the Administration from turning the dollar into a big dime.

That upsets the partisan applecart and makes enough sauce to go round.

Fierce Barracuda Landed

Ed Weeks, of Southport, N. C., holds a barracuda (left), fiercest of all fish, and an amberjack—both Gulf Stream fish now moving northward off North Carolina. Fishing off the Frying Pan Lightship Southport, a party of three caught 72 dolphin, 11 barracuda and three amberjack this week

Bill Ackerman

On Fishing

Angling records have fallen, one after another, during the past year, several of the choicest—one a world's record on sailfish—to meretyros. But then, isn't that the way with almost anything that largely depends on chance? Of all of them it can, however, be said, there is not the slightest cloud on their titles as there is on that of the greatest striped marlin ever taken by rod and reel. The 1,040 pounder caught by Zane Grey at Tahiti in 1930 was badly mangled by sharks and, if caught now, wouldn't be counted as a legal catch on account of mutilation.

ACKERMAN

Another slightly clouded record is that on cobia, and the best way to correct both is by breaking them. On the one, highly improbable; on the other, a fair chance. And now is the time, for catches have been reported from many sections of the lower bay and along the North Carolina coast.

Great Fishing

Capt. George Topping at Messick complains of not catching bluefish, yet his parties during the past two weeks have taken 27 of these cobia weighing up to 35 pounds. This is not large according to local standards, nor as large as they will be in another week or two, but withal certainly great fishing.

Rated as a game fish by any standard, we think the only fish in Maryland and Virginia waters to top them are the three members of the "Big Four" we have on the offshore shoals—white marlin, tuna, mako—and would like to see them fished for more than they are at present.

With the run of white marlin off Ocean City gathering greater momentum with every passing day, and the total this year already more than a dozen, as against the single one of this date last season, it is little wonder questions of all sorts are coming in thick and fast. So to forestall further conjecture, phoning and guessing, we'll outline the history of the run and the sport as we know it.

Angler Honored

The first white marlin was caught off Ocean City on August 3, 1934, by J. H. Schmidt, of Baltimore. Just this past week he was honored for that catch, by being made the first honorary member of the Ocean City Game Fishermen's Association, an organization of game-fishing guides, with the sole purpose of furthering and bettering their sport.

In those days there were only several guides following through the inlet which had blown through the year previous, the offshore fishing. Capt. Crawford Savage was one, Capt. H. C. (Curly) Mattison another, and Capt. (George if we remember correctly) Nichols was a third. The latter two, well versed in the ways of big fish from fishing Florida waters, had seen the finning fish; and agreed whenever possible to fish their parties in this locality, the one accompanying the other, whether he had a party or not.

So it was, fishing a bluefish rig—a Japanese feather—the first white marlin was taken off the Maryland coast. This was not outstanding as to the manner, nor as to the catch itself, for these marlin had been harpooned for fun off eastern Long Island for years by swordfishermen and held in contempt until sportfishermen—Oliver C. Grinnell in particular—took up their defense, when he learned of their great fighting qualities, late in the 1920's.

This catch of Schmidt's was outstanding, however, for it was the beginning of a new northern gamefishing port, a port that last year became the greatest for white marlin in all the country.

The Brighter Side . . .

By Damon Runyon

One time we read in one of those male fashion columns that all the hot men were going in for shorts around the house in summer, as well as on the beach and in the country outdoors. So we got a pair of shorts.

RUNYON

Do you know what shorts are? Well, they are little pants. In some circles, the word pants is not considered proper. In those circles, you say trousers. Now that brings us to a brief detour.

Ever since we can remember, society has been divided into two classes. One class always wears pants and sweats. The other class wears trousers and perspires. There is no real difference in the meaning of the words except socially.

That is, there is no difference in the meaning when you say pants as indicating an article of apparel, or when you say sweat in the sense of emitting the secretions of the sudoriferous gland, as Mr. Webster says. But wait till we tell you what happened to a friend of ours in Newport, R. I.

He was standing around the lobby of a high-toned Newport Hotel one night talking in terms of pants and sweat. They heaved him out on his ear. He was somewhat bewildered by this treatment and was wondering why. Somebody told him that in that atmosphere he should have maintained a strictly trousers and perspiration tone.

He wandered disconsolately down to a joint near the docks and remembering his experience in the hotel, he was careful to speak only in a trousers and perspiration dialect and what do you think happened to him? Two fellows kicked him. And where do you think they kicked him? In the trousers? No, indeed. They kicked him in the pants.

You see, our friend did not realize that just a matter of a few blocks in Newport set up a line of demarcation between the words, or about the same distance that separates them in New York City, and in a lot of other cities, too, for that matter.

Where we came from, pants were pants and sweat was sweat. You almost never heard of trousers and perspiration. If you mentioned in our politest society that you were sweating or that you had torn your pants, no social ostricism was involved because everybody else belonged to the pants-and-sweat set.

It was not until we left home that we became aware of the great social gulf that yawns between the words, and now we will return to the shorts that we started out with. The important thing about them is that they revealed to us the weakest points in our armor of physical beauty, which are our knees. We never knew before that human knees could be so repulsive to the eye.

It is true that we were never much of a knees fan under any circumstances. We have always felt that the knees are the least attractive parts of the anatomy. In the winter, on the seashore down in Dade County, Fla., we see thousands of knees, male and female, and most of the former look like coconuts stuck against trees.

As for the latter, we have trained our eyes to avoid them. We found it too great a shock of disillusionment to pick up a beautiful face with our gaze, then let it travel downward over an equally beautiful neck and shoulders and et cetera, only to wind up against a pair of bilbous knees.

It was just as great a shock when our gaze started with a pair of nice feet and moved upward along lovely lower limb lines to lodge violently against a brace of loose, lopsided knees. So now we have trained our gaze to slide off the shinbones just before reaching the knees and to resume slightly north of that point, like jumping a fence. This system has saved us some terrible pangs of disappointment.

It is our opinion that all female knees should always be kept encased in nice long silk stockings. That way an observer of knees is less likely to be upset and hurt, unless, of course, they are those knees that cannot be concealed in a burlap bag. We have often read of dimpled knees, and no doubt they are beautiful to behold, but we have never seen any.

The most dimpled knees we ever heard of belonged to a lady down in Dade County. It was said of her that she had dimples in her knees deeper than fox holes and folks used to come from miles around to admire them as she reclined on the seashore. Unfortunately she failed to reckon with the occasional rains and she let the dimples in her knees get full of rain water and wound up with—no, no, no!—not water on the knees. Arthritis.

When we donned the shorts we though we were going to look like the fellow in the sketch that accompanied the male fashion column, but the instant we got a full-length sideways view of ourself in the mirror we knew there was something wrong. Our knees seemed to be out of plumb. They gave us the aspect of being all set to make a jump. They frightened us.

We walked around the house in the shorts and when the dogs stood off with hackles raised and barked, we realized that they were frightened, too. We hid the shorts and resumed our pants. When a fellow's knees alarm even his dogs they are certainly something to be kept out of sight.

Congressional Honors Wiffy And Mrs. Cox

Club Members Fete Pair At All-Day Affair; Wiffy Presented With Gift

Congressional Country Club members honored Professional and Mrs. Wiffy Cox in an all-day get-together, including golf and a dinner dance, with House Committee Chairman George Brobeck presenting Cox with a gift from the members as the climax of the party.

The popular mentor topped a big turnout for the day's tournament program, despite the rain, with a 37, 36—73 for low gross. Frank Murray won low net with 82-20, 62, while the low net on the first nine went to J. H. Cook, 43-10, 33, and George Neville won low net on the second nine with 36-5, 31.

W. B. Rumple had low putts, 26; Dr. Howard L. Smith won the approaching contest, while other winners were Davis Weir, low net on the par fives, 14, and R. A. Conn, low net on the par threes, 10. J. L. Orr had high gross with 120.

Mrs. Myron Davy topped the women's play with a low gross of 42 for the long first nine, while low net was a tie between Mrs. F. G. Awalt, 48-7, 41, and Mrs. O. R. Folsom Jones, 54-13, 41.

Gloria Rodgers kept one of the prizes in the Cox family by winning low net on the par fives with 8, while Mrs. M. E. Miller won low net on par threes, 5. Mrs. E. Harrigan's 65 was booby prize.

Dr. O. U. Singer and Mrs. Alf Paul assisted Brobeck on the committee.

Lucy DeLoss 2d in Eastern Archery Shoot

Special Dispatch to The Post

Storrs, Conn., June 28.—Lucy DeLoss, of Washington, D. C., placed second in the first day's shooting of the sixty-first anniversary tournament of the Eastern Archery Association, which started here at the University of Connecticut today.

Competing against 49 other women, Miss DeLoss made 72 hits for 510 points in the first Columbia round, 20 points less than the winner, Miss Ann Weber, of Bloomfield, N. J., in the first National round, who also shot today. She scored 422 points with 70 hits, only 13 points less than the leader. Miss Weber. These rounds will be repeated Thursday for the championship. Miss DeLoss held a 32-point margin over the third-place holder in the National round, but was being hard pressed in the Columbia, boasting of only a 5-point advantage there.

Helen McDaniel was the only other Washington entrant in the four-day tournament. She finished forty-third in the first Columbia round, plunking the target for 56 hits and 234 points. In the first National round, she came in forty-eighth, getting 27 hits and 102 points. The tournament, held this year for the first time, attracted the record number of 121 entries the first day. It will last until Saturday.

Eastern Rifle Shoot Begins Tomorrow

Special Dispatch to The Post

Camp Ritchie, Md., June 28.—More than 500 competitors, a record for the meet, are expected to take part in the eighteenth annual Eastern Small-bore Rifle and Pistol Championships, starting here Friday.

The shoot will continue through five days, with a total of 48 events on the program. Eighteen will be for rifles, 30 for pistols and 5 for special pistols.

Walter Walsh, the Washington, D. C., G-man who holds the .38 caliber pistol record of 298x300 at 25 yards, will be the one to beat in the pistol section, and William Woodring, of Alton, Ill., will be the hottest of the small-bore marksmen.

Irish Veterans Play Arcade Ten Tonight

Morris A. Bealle's Irish War Veterans will meet Sunshine Arcade Laundry in a Metro Night Softball League game at Seat Pleasant, Md., tonight at 9 o'clock.

Sholl's Cafeteria girls meet Farm Credit in a 7:30 o'clock special attraction.

Tru-Blue will play Lancaster (Pa.) Memorial Club at Seat Pleasant Saturday night, and Sholl's Cafeteria engages Turkey Thicket at 7:30.

Two Other Americans Lose

Two other Americans went down, however, in a day marked by a squalling wind and sudden showers Henry Wilfred (Bunny) Austin, Britain's 32-year-old veteran who is seeded No. 1, eliminated Owen Anderson of Los Angeles, 6—3, 6—4, 6—4, and Mrs. D. L. Little, the former Dorothy Round, beat Mrs. Dorothy Andrus, of Stamford, Conn., 6—3, 6—0.

That leaves Bobby Riggs, of Chicago, seeded second, and Elwood Cooke, of Portland, Oreg., ranked sixth, with Smith in men's singles, and Mrs. Sarah Palfrey Fabyan, of Cambridge, Mass., who beat Mrs. S. P. Hammersley, 6—2, 6—3, and Miss Wheeler with Alice Marble and Helen Jacobs in women's singles. The latter two won their third-round brackets yesterday.

Toast of the Sandlots

LEE LODGE.

One of the bumper crops of Lodge brothers which has made Briarley Military Academy athletic history, 19-year-old Lee has carried his baseball talent into the unlimited sandlot field with marked success. He's with Prince George Athletic Club now, and he'll enroll at Western Maryland University for a whirl at college ball in the fall.

Instead of the pitching job that Lee had grown accustomed to at Briarley, he's now a shortstop, and the record shows the transformation was no mistake. In Prince George's first eight games, all of them victories, Lee accepted 47 chances and muffed only two. He batted a spectacular .531 in those eight games, though his average dropped slightly last Sunday, when the county lads were shut out by an irate Heurich team.

All of Lee's latent ability, as well as that of his three brothers, was developed by his dad, the versatile Sidney Lodge, who coaches football, basketball and baseball at Briarley, as well as president of the institution. Twenty years of playing and coaching experience is behind the elder Lodge's tutoring, and it has been imparted in full to his sons, particularly to this tall, husky youngster with the bright baseball future ahead.

Mrs. Wilkinson Wins Duffers Cup in Play-off

Scores Net 84 at Manor For 1-Stroke Margin Over Mrs. Shaffer

Mrs. C. J. Wilkinson, Congressional, won the play-off for the Duffer's Tournament Trophy over Mrs. H. N. Shaffer, Army and Navy, yesterday at Manor, with a net 84 to 85. They tied with net 74's in Tuesday's tourney.

Mrs. Wilkinson scored 104, ten strokes higher than her previous total, due to the conditions, and deducted a 20 handicap for the winning score. Mrs. Shaffer was two strokes higher with 106, and her 21 handicap was one stroke short of a tie.

Mrs. Frank H. Kramer, tournament chairman of the association, presented the Elizabeth Harris Trophy to Mrs. Wilkinson, while Mrs. Shaffer received the runner-up prize.

Anglers Required To Use Scales In Trout Fishing

Special Dispatch to The Post

Staunton, Va., June 28.—Beginning July 6, Sherando Lake will be opened to large-mouth bass fishing for one month, and in order to avoid unreasonable fish tales, Forest Supervisor C. M. Howard will make available a yardstick and scales at the camp administrative building where fishermen are asked to report when entering and leaving the area.

Fishing will be permitted from noon until sundown, under general State laws, except that the daily creel limit will be five. Those fishing in the 21-acre artificial lake, which has been stocked with bass, must have State or county license and the National Forest stamp. Bass placed in the lake, brought from Back Bay, weigh from 1 to 7 pounds, Howard announced.

Games Wanted

The Snug Harbor baseball team is on the lookout for a game Sunday with a leading unlimited club. Teams interested are requested to phone Manager Al Moreland at Bowie 2882.

Marion Miley And Patty Berg Golf Victors

Gain Second Round Of Trans-Mississippi Play at Minneapolis

Minneapolis, June 28 (AP).—Patty Berg, of Minneapolis, defending champion and favorite, will meet Jo MacRae, of Ames, Iowa, in the second round of the women's Trans-Mississippi Golf Tournament at the country club today.

Miss Berg, who is also the national women's titlist, defeated Miss Audrey Neffler, of Fairmont, Minn., 8 and 6 in her opening match, shooting one under par for the 12 holes.

Miss MacRae nosed out Mrs. Charles Newbold, Wichita, Kans., 2 and 1, in their first-round match.

Miss Marion Miley, of Lexington, Ky., ambitious for a third championship in the tourney she won in 1935 and 1936, defeated Mrs. Chester Keating, of St. Joseph, Mo., 6 and 5.

Other first-round results included: Mrs. Lillian Zech, of Chicago, defeated Jeanne Cline, Bloomington, Ill., 4 and 2.

Shirley Ann Johnson, Chicago, defeated Miss Phyllis Otto, Atlantic, Iowa, 5 and 4.

Federal Needle Fails to Spur U. S. Business

Progress Here Less Than in Any Major Country, Bank Says

New York, June 28.—To a superficial view it would appear that business had become unconditionally dependent upon Government spending, states the Guaranty Trust Co. in discussing rising Government debt and some of its consequences in the current issue of the Guaranty Survey, published today.

"But several vital facts point to a different conclusion," the Survey continues. "One is that business in the United States, in spite of the vast amounts of public funds that have been spent to stimulate it, has been found to have shown less net progress toward recovery since the low point of the depression than business in any other large country for which reasonably satisfactory data are available.

Ninth Deficit Year

"The end of this month will mark the close of the ninth successive year of deficit financing by the Federal Government. And the outlook is for an indefinite prolongation of the policy of borrowing, spending, and lending by the Government, with some signs that it will be intensified, rather than moderated, as time goes on. Recent press reports indicate that there is under consideration a new and far-reaching plan for Government 'investment' in business.

"The public reaction to these proposals has been formed against the background of President Roosevelt's address last month before the Retailers' National Forum, in which the President defended the use of borrowed funds by the Government to provide purchasing power and promote business recovery, and belittled the dangers inherent in the mounting national debt. The new program, in other words, is viewed as a phase of the board policy of Government spending on 'investment' as a means of increasing the national income.

"This policy has been responsible for most of the rise in the tax burden and the national debt in the last nine years—and yet there are in excess of 10,000,000 workers unemployed and about 20,000,000 individuals wholly or partially dependent on governmental relief payments, and industrial production and national income are at 77 per cent of their respective 1929 levels."

Furniture Orders 17% Ahead of Last Year

Chicago, June 28 (AP).—Furniture orders booked last month topped April orders by 8 per cent and May, 1938, by 2 per cent, the National Association of Furniture Manufacturers reported today. Orders for the first five months this year were 17 per cent greater than during the like 1938 period.

Total production for the first five months increased 31 per cent over the corresponding period last year and pay rolls advanced 20 per cent.

Five Months' Rail Operating Net 2.7 Times 1938 Period

Class I railroads of the United States in the first five months of 1939 had a net railway operating income of $126,167,043 which was at the annual rate of return of 1.50 per cent on their property investment, according to reports just filed by the carriers with the Bureau of Railway Economics of the Association of American Railroads and made public today.

In the first five months of 1938, their net railway operating income was $46,025,993 or 0.55 per cent on their property investment, and in the first five months of 1930 their net railway operating income was $301,732,780 or 3.51 per cent on property investment.

Class I railroads in the first five months of 1939 paid $142,900,527 in taxes compared with $140,635,147 in the same period in 1938, and $146,785,356 in the same period in 1930. For the month of May alone, the tax bill of the Class I railroads amounted to $28,831,347, an increase of $480,516 or 1.7 per cent above May, 1938.

Thirty-five Class I railroads failed to earn expenses and taxes in the first five months of 1939, of which 12 were in the eastern district, 6 in the southern district, and 17 in the western district.

Gov. James Vetoes Tax Exemption Bill

Harrisburg, Pa., June 28 (AP).—Gov. Arthur H. James vetoed today a bill which would have exempted manufacturers from the Commonwealth's tax on capital stock.

The chief executive said he was "in hearty sympathy with any objective which would lend practical assurance to taxpayers that those encouragements which led Pennsylvania to predominance will be revived," but that the bill contained a phrase which caused the Dauphin County (Harrisburg) court to declare unconstitutional a tax on out-of-State corporations. This decision has been appealed to the State Supreme Court.

N. Y. Exchange To Stay Open On Saturdays

Governors Decide Not To Follow Banks in Summer Closings

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 28.—The board of governors of the New York Stock exchange voted today to keep the exchange open for business Saturdays during July and August, despite the fact that large New York City banks last week decided to close Saturdays during the summer.

The exchange said that the "big board" was a national institution and that approximately 85 per cent or more of the public business of its members originated outside New York City.

For his reason, many of the members considered closing would be a "provincial" action and that because of the overwhelming proportion of business coming in from cities outside New York, the exchange was obligated to continue Saturday dealings.

The exchange's statement said the majority of banking institutions outside of New York and of business institutions in New York are preparing to remain open on Saturdays as usual this summer.

The summer bank holidays followed signing of a permissive law last week by Gov. Herbert H. Lehman.

U. S. Pig Crop 20% Over Last Year

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics estimated the 1939 spring pig crop today at 52,314,000 head, an increase of 20 per cent or 8,864,000 over the 1938 spring crop.

This estimate, based on reports from more than 150,000 farmers, was the largest for any spring since 1933 and indicated, the bureau said, that the total 1939 crop—both spring and fall production—would be about 83,000,000 head, or the third largest since 1923. The crop last year totaled about 71,000,000 head. The largest yearly pig crops since 1923 was 84,200,000 head in 1933 and the smallest was 55,086,000 in 1935.

Japanese Firms Order Two Steel Mills Here

Pittsburgh, June 28 (AP).—The United Engineering & Foundry Co. announced today it had received orders for "several million dollars" worth of steel mill equipment from two Japanese firms.

An 86-inch semi-continuous plate mill will be made for the Nippon-Seitetsu Kaisha Steel Mill Co. at Hirohata, Japan, and a modern sheet rolling mill for the Sumitomo Metal Industries, Ltd., of Osaka. The plate mill will be delivered within a year and the sheet mill within six months. All of the work will be done in United's plants in this country.

Boston Wool Market

Boston, June 28 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agricul.).—Some houses in Boston were receiving inquiries for wool more frequently today than earlier in the week. Sales, however, continued very slow and most transactions were limited volume. Average 12-month Texas wools, spot Boston, were bringing 66 to 68 cents, scoured basis, while some houses offered similar wools for future delivery at around 65 cents, scoured basis, delivered to Eastern users. Quotations on fleeces offered for shipment from Ohio and Michigan were reported showing a firming tendency.

Foreign Markets

By the Associated Press.

London, June 28.—Stock market turnover was small today and prices slightly firmer on the more favorable Far Eastern outlook. British funds and Japanese bonds attracted modest support, while the industrial group reacted from their early high levels. Transatlantic securities opened higher but lost some of the advance later in the day.

Paris.—The bourse closed weak today with international shares in supply. Suez Canal declined 245 francs and Bank of France was off more than 100. Rentes were also heavy, losing 55 to 145 centimes.

Liverpool.—Reports that subsidy payments on a sliding scale may be instituted on American cotton exports caused considerable hesitancy in futures trading today. Prices moved narrowly and closed 6 higher to 2 points lower. Recovery from early weakness put wheat futures unchanged to 1d higher as liquidation subsided and short covering ensued.

Decline Increases Momentum at Close Foreign and Washington News Chilling, Trading the Most Active in Two Weeks

New York, June 28.—The stock market was lower throughout today's session but the most extreme weakness came in the final half hour. Then prices gave ground with ease on a combination of tension over foreign political news and advices from Washington indicating that New Dealers had mustered their forces to keep the way open for a compromise on the Senate's curtailment of President Roosevelt's monetary powers, stripped from him Monday by a combination of Republicans and Democrats.

The close of the market was at the low of the down, with the composite average showing a decline of three-quarters point. The volume on the big board of 541,780 shares was the largest since June 15. The close of the above average was the lowest since May 23 and for the first time this year the composite is below that of the corresponding day in 1938.

Chart Readings

The break was seen by the chart technicians as further confirmation of the opinion of Dow theorists, who hold that the intermediate trend has been reversed to downward. The decline today broke through the resistance level of June 16. Although the major trend has been downward since last November, according to the above technicians, the intermediate trend has been upward between April 11 and June 10.

Mid-week trade news contained considerable of a favorable nature, but the financial district paid little heed to the ordinary indices of business. Its concern was with the indications of growing tension abroad and the consideration given the progress of the monetary bill. As ridiculous as was the President's charge Tuesday that the Senate vote, stripping him of his power to devalue the dollar, would return control over the money market to Wall Street speculators, the Street, nevertheless, realized that the President still retains czar-like powers over our currency and that he has not yet been beaten.

New Deal Complexion

For the bill, passed by the Senate, which would let his power to devalue the dollar expire tomorrow night, must first be argued out in conference between representatives of the House and the Senate. And the committees appointed today to take care of this matter have an overwhelmingly New Deal tint. (Naturally Democrats would be in a majority on such committees, but the pity is that the houses of Congress concentrated so freely on New Deal Democrats, instead of the saner members of that great party.) This increased the probabilities that the President, somehow, will be able to come out of the controversy with much of his same powers over our monetary system, instead of having such control revert to Congress, which was given such power under the Constitution.

But even if the President should regain much of the prestige he has lost, the important thing is that the Senate gave him as convincing a vote of lack of confidence as has been dealt him since he first started, more than six years ago, to take over the rights, privileges and powers of the legislative branch of the Government, and that is no mean victory.

News the Last Straw

Word of who had been named by the Senate came shortly after 2 o'clock and when the House conferees were announced about 2:30 the rout in the stock market became complete. Greatest weakness was displayed by the metals, steels and rails, with the motors also doing poorly. United States Rubber was the most active stock, closing down more than 2 points. Losses of other important leaders included Chrysler, 2⅜; steel, 1⅝; motors, 1½; Celanese, 1⅛; Bethlehem, 2⅞; Sunshine Mining, 1; Texas, 1⅛, and Westinghouse, 3¾.

Trade news was favorable but was without influence. Tire shipments were up 44.4 per cent in May compared with the same month last year. Replacement business was reported as being very brisk. Electric power output again was at the best level since February and was 13.2 per cent ahead of a year ago. Class I railroads reported May and the first five months' earnings as well above 1938 and the Iron Age said that while price cutting still was in evidence, the efforts of producers to adhere to published quotations was more determined. The publication predicted 55 per cent operations for the last half of the year.

Bond Market Lower

Listed bond trading today reflected the growing pessimism and indifference of the financial community. All groups of securities lost ground, save a few local traction issues. United States Treasury issues dipped in the formal trading and continued the decline in late counter dealings. Speculative domestic issues drifted lower and foreign dollar bonds were decidedly unsettled. Turnover amounted to $5,400,000.

Losses in United States Treasury bonds ranged from 1-32 to 10-32 point, and the longest issues again are a full point or more under recent highs. Guaranteed issues of the home and farm corporations were dull and lower, this section still suffering from the neglect occasioned by the talk of huge financing projects by means of guaranteed issues. Highest rated utility, railroad and industrial bonds were idle and little changed.

Wheat Rally Wiped Out by Late Selling

Declines for Day Reach as Much as Half Cent a Bushel

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, June 28.—Wheat fell as much as ½ cent a bushel here today after wiping out an early advance of ⅛ cent. Closing prices were at the day's lows.

Trade was brisk on the upturn, but buying enthusiasm, due largely to reports of crop-damaging rains Southwest, was soon tempered by a forecast for clear and more favorable harvest weather. Wet harvest complaints in the Southwest were confirmed by the Government weekly report, but it also indicated spring wheat prospects had improved.

Failure of Liverpool to reflect yesterday's and today's early strength here contributed to the eventual downturn. Kansas City scored early gains of more than a cent and held up well during most of the session, closing unchanged to ¼ off. Winnipeg finished unchanged to ⅛ off and Minneapolis ¼-½ down. Liverpool closed unchanged to ⅛ higher.

Wheat here closed unchanged to ⅜ off, July, 70¾; September, 71⅛-¾; corn, ⅛-½ down; July, 47 ¼-⅛; September, 49-49⅛; oats, ⅛ up to ⅜ off; soy beans, ⅝-1¼ off; rye, ⅝-⅞ down; lard, unchanged to 5 cents lower.

Cotton Futures Decline Under General Selling

New York, June 28 (AP).—Brokers attached blame for a 4 to 12 point drop in cotton futures to "technical factors" today. Late selling by Southern spot houses, Wall Street interests and professional traders swept prices to the day's low.

Some observers suggested the recent flight into new higher price ground for the season had left the staple in a vulnerable position. Nor were buyers reassured by the unsettled outlook abroad and lower security prices.

Bombay houses said nervousness over possible revision of Government silver buying policy had checked demand from that source considerably.

July was hardest hit of all deliveries as many traders sold the near month and bought distant positions.

Electric Power Production 13.2% Above Year Ago

New York, June 28 (AP).—The Nation's power switch was pushed forward another notch last week, according to figures released today by the Edison Electric Institute.

Electric power production in the United States during the week ended June 24 advanced .9 of 1 point to 2,285,033,000 kilowatt-hours from 2,264,719,000 in the preceding week and was 13.2 per cent ahead of 2,019,036,000 in the comparable 1938 week, the institute reported.

The gain, more than seasonally expected, carried the Associated Press index of production to 118.6 from 117.8 in the preceding week. The index, which is based on 1929-30 as 100 and is adjusted for seasonal and long-term trend, stood at 106.7 a year ago.

University President On Sulphur Co. Board

New York, June 28 (AP).—Freeport Sulphur Co. announced today the election to its board of directors of Alan Valentine, 38-year-old president of the University of Rochester, (N. Y.)

John Hay Whitney, chairman of the Freeport company said Valentine's addition to the board was in recognition of an "enlarging responsibility to the American people on the part of American business." Valentine has been president of the University of Rochester since 1935.

May Tire Sales 9.1% Above April

New York, June 28 (AP).—Shipments of pneumatic casings in May were estimated today by the Rubber Manufacturers Association at 4,753,403 units, an increase of 9.1 per cent over April shipments of 4,355,584. May, 1938, shipments aggregated 3,290,968 units.

Production in the month totaled 4,418,072 units, compared with 4,211,152 in April and 2,662,623 in May a year ago.

Business Index Rises

New York, June 28 (AP).—Time magazine's index of business conditions rose last week to 93.4 from 92.7 the previous week. A marked increase in trade center spending more than offset continued weakness in financial centers and was responsible for the rise.

Windsors to Visit England in Fall

Aix Les Bains, France, June 28 (INS).—The Duke and Duchess of Windsor will pay a short visit to England some time in September to straighten out certain personal business affairs, it was learned tonight.

After returning to Paris they will consider the possibility of visiting the United States this year. The Windsors are making Paris their residence for another year and have no intention at present of resuming their residence in England, as reported in the British press last night.

Norris and May Blame Each Other In TVA Deadlock

Senator Norris (Independent-Republican), of Nebraska, and Representative May (Democrat), of Kentucky, last night charged each other with responsibility for failure of negotiations between House and Senate conferees to agree on Tennessee Valley legislation.

Norris, representing the Senate in conference on the bill to enable the TVA to purchase private power properties, charged the House conferees with "stalling." He declared, after another fruitless session yesterday that "the House conferees do not want any bill."

May, chairman of the House Military Affairs Committee and head of the House conferees, said:

"Responsibility for the present stalemate is squarely on the shoulders of Senator Norris. It is a sad commentary on our democratic system of government that one member of 'the most deliberate body in the world' does not know the meaning of the word compromise, and presumes to impose his will, arbitrarily and arrogantly, upon the House of Representatives."

Anacostia Scores

The Anacostia Cardinals yesterday defeated the Falcons baseball club, 5-1, on the Fairlawn diamond for their fifth straight victory.

Betsy Ross in Tie

The Betsy Ross baseball team fought to a 3-3 deadlock Sunday with the Brookland Orioles on the latter's field at Tenth street and Michigan avenue northeast.

Allies Held Giving In to Soviet Pact

Paris, June 28 (AP).—France and Great Britain were reported tonight to have reached an agreement on new instructions to be sent their representatives in Moscow.

These reports said the new proposals gave Russia virtually everything she had asked, including a formal defensive alliance which would take effect automatically in case of German aggression against any of Russia's small Baltic neighbors.

The British and French envoys were expected to present their new plan to Foreign Commissar Molotoff tomorrow.

Bill Reported Out To Senate Allows 5000 More Clerks

More than 500 clerks will be added to the Federal legislative pay roll if a bill reported yesterday by the Senate Appropriations Committee becomes law.

Senator Tydings (Democrat), of Maryland, reported a House bill with amendments to increase the clerical hire of members of both houses. The House measure jumped the clerical hire allowance of Representatives from $5,000 to $6,500 and left the Senate additions to be made by the Senate.

The first of three amendments recommended by the Senate Appropriations Committee make permanent the jobs of 96 assistant clerks now working on a temporary basis at $1,800 a year. The second authorizes each Senator to employ an additional clerk at $1,500 and every Senator from a State with a population of 3,000,000 or more to hire still another clerk. The third provides a research assistant at $5,000 for each of the Senate party leaders.

Funeral Today For Miss French, U. S. Ex-Worker

Funeral services for Margaret F. French, 38, for 20 years an employe of the old Shipping Board, now the Maritime Commission, will be held at 12:30 p. m. today at Hysong's Funeral Parlor, 1300 N street northwest, with burial in Rock Creek Cemetery.

Miss French died Tuesday at the Middleburg, Va., estate of J. Caldwell Jenkins, where she had been living since ill health forced her retirement about two years ago. She had been secretary to Mr. Jenkins when he was vice president of the board.

A native of Washington, Miss French formerly lived at 623 Upshur street northwest and was an active member of Petworth Baptist Church. She leaves her brother, Charles E. French, and two cousins, Raymond Gaskins and Mrs. W. C. Miller, of this city, besides other relations in Norfolk, Va., and Portsmouth, Va.

Thieves Cart Off Enough to Start A Clothing Store

If a new household accessory or clothing store opens for business in the near future, Washington police will be interested, but not surprised.

Likewise, the owner of a Cleveland Park residence, ransacked as he and his family were vacationing in Connecticut.

Thoroughgoing thieves stole the following articles some time in the last week from the home of Sherman Ford, head of the Washington office of the Texas Oil Co., 3515 Woodland drive northwest: 48 sheets, 44 blankets, 46 towels—all in assorted sizes, shapes, colors and textures—a bath mat and 36 articles of clothing, including women's dresses, suits, evening coats and negligees, and men's and boys' overcoats, jackets and shoes. Value, $3,000.

CARD OF THANKS.

PEAK, WILLIAM L.—The family of the late Col. WILLIAM L. PEAK gratefully acknowledge with deep appreciation the sympathy, flowers and other expressions of kindness extended by friends, coworkers and organizations. We are also deeply grateful to the pallbearers, honorary pallbearers, the guard of honor and to those who assisted in any way to lighten the burden incident to the passing of our beloved one.

MRS. W. L. PEAK AND FAMILY.

Contract Bridge

By Florence Osborn.

Each month the Culbertson national studios prepare a questionnaire which is designed to keep loyal Culbertson followers up to the minute in the studio's developments in the field of bidding and play.

We have selected a few questions by which Culbertson players may test how well they are keeping up with their leaders and by which followers of different systems or theories can check their ideas.

With East-West vulnerable, the bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
1 NT.	Pass	2 ♡	2 ♠
2 NT.	Pass	3 NT.	?

On each of these hands you are South. What action do you take?

1. ♠ Q J 10 9 8 6 5 2 ♡ 5 3 ◇ Q J 10 ♣ None. Bid.....
2. ♠ K Q J 10 2 ♡ K 5 ◇ Q J 9 ♣ 10 5 2 Bid.....

With both sides vulnerable, the bidding has proceeded:

West	North	East	South
3 ♠	Dbl.	Pass	?

On each of these hands you are South. What action do you take?

3. ♠ Q 4 2 ♡ Q 6 3 ◇ K 10 8 5 ♣ A 7 4 Bid.....
4. ♠ A ♡ K 10 8 5 ◇ A J 9 3 ♣ K J 8 4 Bid.....

With both sides vulnerable, you are the dealer on each of these hands. What action do you take?

5. ♠ K Q J 10 ♡ K Q J 10 9 ◇ K J ♣ 8 4 Bid.....
6. ♠ A K J 10 9 6 3 ♡ K 8 2 ◇ 6 2 ♣ 8 Bid.....

7. The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ◇	1 ♠	2 ♡	Pass
3 ♡	Pass	4 ♡	Pass
Pass	Pass

You are West, and your spade holding is Q 10 9 2. You have made up your mind to lead spades. Which card do you play?

The queen. The ten. The nine. The deuce.

Answers

1. Four spades. A defenseless hand, this bid is made for the purpose of taking a save. It is true that with a trickless dummy the penalty will be 500 points, but in that case the opponents will have a sure game and probable slam. It is unlikely on this biddins, however, for opponents to have slam aspirations and, therefore, it is reasonable to suppose that partner has a trick. If this trick materializes then the penalty will be only 300 points, unquestionably a good save.

2. Pass. Having bid spades at the two-level, your partner is sure to open that suit, thereby giving you an excellent chance to defeat the contract. To double the only other concevable action would risk too much. It would enable the opponents to reach a possibly sounder four-heart contract. It is also concevable that West holds the heart ace, in which case the opponents would make overtricks at a doubled contract.

3. Three no trump. In this case, also, you should be able to defeat three spades, but now you have an excellent chance to go game in no trump. You have honors in every suit and a sketchy, but probably effective, spade stopper, inasmuch as there seems to be little chance that East can gain the lead to come through your spade queen.

4. Four spades. This cue bid in the opponents suit is by all odds the most intelligent and constructive action you can take. You have a splendid hand with excellent support for three suits, and if your partner's take out double was sound, you should easily be able to make a slam in the best fitting trump suit. It would be silly, however, for you to try to select that trump suit from among your three four-card suits—it is infinitely wiser for you to ask partner to declare himself, and then to support his bid.

5. One spade. This is the "prepared" bid. You must allow for a one-no-trump two-diamond or two-club response, in which case you are well prepared to bid two hearts. If you start with one heart and your partner makes any of the mentioned responses, you will be unable to show the spade suit except at the expense of forcing up the bidding level, i. e., if partner prefers your first-named heart suit he will have to go back to three hearts over two spades.

6. Three spades. This is a typical new Culbertson three-bid-six-and-a-half winners in the spade suit with a maximum of one loser in the suit and the heart king outside.

7. The fourth best, the deuce.

The Federal Diary

By The Diarist

"FOOD STAMPS" by which the Federal surplus commodities division of the Department of Agriculture is issuing food products to relief families will, more than likely, not cross the counters of any Washington store.

The plan, as it stands now, is being restricted to cities whose population is little more than 300,000, and where the relief set-up is typical. The Capital doesn't fit into the first part of that picture and with the large preponderance of salaried Federal employes, it doesn't jibe with the second part either.

Seattle, Wash., went on the rolls this week, joining Rochester, N. Y., the first city; and Dayton, Ohio, the second.

SETTLE BACK at 4:30 p. m. on Sunday and flick that radio key around to WRC. It will carry from New York a national network spelling bee on which a group of five Federal employes from down our way will sail into a list of ten-syllable twisters. The Capital City Spelling Club, composed of such stalwarts as Mrs. Dorothy Tanty, Ora E. Haines, R. C. Althouse, Willard B. Smith and Elmer C. Helm, will spell out t-r-o-u-b-l-e to the famous Indianapolis McGuffey Club of Indianapolis, Ind. This marks the second time the Capitolites have strutted stuff from the New York division.

Formed seven years ago—it's the oldest outfit of its kind in town—the group meets twice a month under the leadership of Elmer C. Helm. About 250 words are assigned for each practice match.

A few of them are: pergameneous, which means "like parchment;" anociassociation, a surgical term which denotes a method of preventing shock (in this corner it has just the opposite effect), and cosmopoietic, which means "world-creating."

There will be a return bout in Washington next Wednesday evening at 7:30 when the Indianapolis contenders meet the local club at the Mount Pleasant Library. Francis E. Old, head of the Waverly Spelling Demons from Baltimore, will blow the referee's whistle. Following this match, Mrs. Dorothy Tanty will conduct the Baltimore-Indianapolis rounds the same evening.

LET'S HOPE there's moonlight on the Potomac July 18. Edward J. Kelly, president of the Interior Department Recreation Association, doesn't admit to having consulted the almanac on this subject, but there's no doubt in his mind that the Department's annual cruise will be a success. About 1,500, including a big delegation from the Public Works Administration and the U. S. Housing Authority, are due to fill the steamer City of Washington up to its smokestacks.

Mr. Kelly, who is thinking up all kinds of fun for the evening, has on his committee for the event, J. Leland Acuff, Helen Cranston, Addie A. Hughes, Evelyn Gliem, Frances Sue Brady, Guy Gaston, Wesley Nelson, Tommy Hampton, John Wilkinson, Robert Price, Kenfield Bailey, L. P. Kirkland and Sam Barrett. Including President Kelly that ought to add up to 14 good ideas.

THE PUBLIC HEALTH SERVICE is going to open a brand-new laboratory out at Bethesda, Md., the first of September. Working in it will Dr. Lyndon F. Small and Dr. Nathan B. Eddy, who will put their test tubes together in a search for a morphine substitute. Along with this big order, they will be looking for a quinine substitute. It seems that with the Netherlands holding the entire world quinine supply in the Dutch East Indies, the United States would be left in an embarrassing position if something happened to cut off this Dutch export.

Small, a professor at the University of Virginia, and Eddy, a professor at the University of Michigan, will devote their full-time interests to this new research assignment. Small will stick to the chemical side of the problem while Eddy will take up the pharmacological aspects.

LAST WORDS: The monthly catalogue of United States public documents has been issued. In case you aren't interested in any of the items listed, you can use the catalogue for a paperweight . . . It's that heavy; the Utah State Society, of which Iris Parrish is president, will go cruising next Thursday on the S. S. Potomac. More moonlight, please.

P. T. David to Join Youth Commission

Paul T. David, secretary of the President's Advisory Committee on Education, will join the staff of the American Youth Commission on July 1 as special assistant to the director, it was announced yesterday.

David has been with the advisory committee since its organization in 1936, and was previously attached to the committee on administrative management, the Tennessee Valley Authority, the Brookings Institution and the staff of the Interstate and Foreign Commerce Committee of the House of Representatives.

Contract Awarded

The Navy Department Tuesday awarded a $163,500 contract to the W. P. Thurston Co., of Richmond, for construction of a sewage disposal plant and intercepting sewer system at the Marine Base at Quantico. The work is to take eight months.

Dr. Rowe Fetes Engineer Pupils From Argentina

Twelve Argentine engineering students, recently graduated from the University of Litoral in Rosario, were luncheon guests of Dr. Leo S. Rowe, director general of the Pan American Union, yesterday. The group is making a first-hand study of public works projects in the United States.

Ambassador Felipe A. Espil, of the Argentine Embassy, will receive the group this noon. The students will be guests of Dr. Lyman S. Briggs, director of the Bureau of Standards, at a luncheon tomorrow noon.

PULITZER PRIZE NOVEL

THE YEARLING

By Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

Chapter XXIII

"Pa, the quail has hatched under the Scuppernong. And the grapes is makin.'"

Penny rested on the plow handles. He was wet with sweat. He looked across the field. A hawk flew low, quartering.

He said, "If the hawks don't git the quail, and the 'coons don't git the Scuppernongs, we'll have a mighty good meal, about first frost."

Jody said, "I hate the hawks eatin' the quail, but I don't someway mind the 'coons eatin' the grapes."

"That's because you love quail-meat more'n you love grapes."

"No, 'tain't. Hit's because I hate hawks and I love 'coons."

"Fodder-wing learned you that," Penny said, "with all them pet 'coons."

"I reckon so."

"The hogs come up yit, boy?"

"Not yit."

Penny frowned.

"I purely hate to think the Forresters has trapped 'em. But they ain't never stayed off so long. If 'twas bears, they wouldn't all be gone to once't."

"I been as far as the old clearin', Pa, and the tracks goes on west from there."

"Time I git done workin' these peas, we're jest obliged to take Rip and Julia and go track 'em."

"What'll we do, do the Forresters have 'em trapped?"

"Whatever we got to do, when the time comes."

"Ain't you skeert to face the Forresters agin?"

"No, for I'm right."

"Would you be skeert if you was wrong?"

"If I was wrong, I wouldn't face 'em."

"What'll we do, do we git beat up agin?"

"Take it for our share and go on."

"I'd ruther let the Forresters keep the hogs."

"And go without meat? A black eye'll quiet down a heap quicker'n a empty belly. You want to beg off goin'?"

He hesitated.

"I reckon not."

Penny turned back to his cultivating.

"Then go tell your Ma please Ma'am to fix us early supper."

Jody went to the house. His mother was rocking and sewing on the shady porch. A small blue-bellied lizard scuttled from under her chair. Jody grinned, thinking how quickly she would heave her frame from the rocker if she had known.

Marjorie Kinnan Rawlings

"Please, Ma'am, Pa says to fix us supper right now. We got to go huntin' the hogs."

"About time."

"She finished her seam leisurely. He dropped on the step below her.

"Well, face 'em. Black-hearted thieves."

He stared at her. She had been furious at both him and his father because they had fought the Forresters at Volusia.

He said, "We're like to git beat up and bloodied agin, Ma."

She folded her sewing impatiently.

"Well, pity on us, we got to have our meat. Who'll git it if you don't"

She went into the house. He heard her thumping the lid on the Dutch oven. He was confused. His mother talked much of "duty." He had always hated the very word. Why was it his duty to let the Forresters maul him again, to recover the hogs, if it had not been his duty to let them maul him in order to help his friend Oliver? It seemed more honorable to him to bleed for a friend than for a side of bacon. He sat idly, listening to the fluttered whirring of mockingbirds in the chinaberry. The jays were chasing the redbirds out of the mulberry trees. There was a squabble for food even in the safety of the clearing. But it seemed to him there was always enough here or every one. There was food and shelter for father and mother and son; for old Caesar; for Trixie and her spotted calf; for Rip and Julia; for the chickens, clucking and crowing and scratching; for the hogs, grunting in at evening for a cob of corn; for the song-birds in the trees, and the quail nesting under the arbor; for all of these, there was enough at the clearing.

Out in the scrub, the war waged ceaselessly. The bears and wolves and panthers and wildcats all preyed on the deer. Bears even ate the cubs of other bears, all meat being to their maws the same. Squirrels and wood-rats, 'possums and 'coons, must all scurry for their lives. Birds and small furred creatures cowere in the shadow of hawks and owl. But the clearing was safe. Penny kept it so, with his good fences, with Rip and old Julia, with a wariness that seemed to Jody to be unsleeping. Sometimes he heard a rustling in the night, and the door opened and closed, and it was Penny, slipping back to his bed from a silent hunt for some marauder.

THERE WAS INTRUSION BACK and forth, as well. The Baxters went into the scrub for flesh of deer and hide of wildcat. And the predatory animals and the hungary varmints came into the clearing when they could. The clearing was ringed around with hunger. It was a fortress in the scrub. Baxter's Island was an island of plenty in a hungry sea.

He heard the trace chains clanking. Penny was returning to the lot along the fence row. Jody ran ahead to open the lot gates for him. He helped with the unharnessing. He climbed the ladder into the loft and pitched down a forkful of cowpea hay into Caesar's manger. There was no more corn and would not be until the summer's crop was made. He found a pile of hay with the dried peas still clinging to it and threw it down for Trixie. There would be more milk in the morning for both the Baxters and the spotted calf. The calf was inclined to leanness, for Penny was weaning it from the cow. The loft was heavy with heat, trapped under the thick hand-hewn slabs of the shingled roof. The hay crackled with a dry sweetness. It tickled his nostrils. He lay down in it a moment, abandoning himself to the resiliency. He was no more comfortable when he heard his mother call. He scrambled down from the loft. Penny had finished milking. They went to the house together. Supper was on the table. There were only clabber and cornbread, but there was enough.

Ma Baxter said, "You fellers try to git a shot at some meat while you're off."

Penny nodded.

"I'm totin' my gun o' purpose."

They set off to the west. The sun was still above the treetops. There had been no rain for several days, but now cumulus clouds were piled low in the north and west. From the east and south, a steel grayness crept toward the glaring brilliance of the west.

Penny said, "A good rain today'd near about leave us lay by the corn."

There was no breeze. The air lay over the road like a thick down comforter. It seemed to Jody that it was something that could be pushed away, if he could struggle up through it. The sand burned his bare calloused soles. Rip and Julia walked listlessly, heads down, tails sagging, their tongues dripping from open jaws. It was not easy to follow the tracks of the hogs where the loose soil had been so long dry. Penny's eye was keener here than Julia's nose. The hogs had fed through the black-jack, crossed the abandoned clearing and then headed for the prairie, where lily roots could be dug, and pools of cool water could be muddied and wallowed in. They did not range so far when food could be had close at home. Now was a barren and parlous season. There was no mast yet, of pine or oak or hickory, except what could be rooted deep under the leaves from last year's falling. Palmetto berries were still too green, even for the undiscerning taste of a hog. Three miles from Baxter's Island Penny crouched to examine the trail. He picked up a grain of corn and turned it over in his hand. He pointed to the hoof-marks of a horse.

"They baited them hogs," he said.

HE STRAIGHTENED his back. His face was grave. Jody watched him anxiously.

"Well, son, we're obliged to follow."

"Clare to the Forresters?"

The trail zigzagged where the hogs had weaved back and forth for the scattered corn.

Penny said, "I kin understand the Forresters fightin' Oliver and I kin understand them rompin' on you and me. But I be dogged if I kin understand cold-out meanness."

A quarter of a mile beyond stood a rough hog-trap. It had been sprung but the pen was now empty. It was made of untrimmed saplings and a limber sapling had been baited to spring the gate behind the crowding hogs.

"Them rascals was nearby, waitin'," Penny said. "That pen wouldn't hold a hog no time."

Penny said, "All right, boy. Here's our way."

The sun was near the horizon. The cumulus clouds were white puff-balls, stained with the red and yellow wash of the sunset. The south was filled with darkness, like the smoke of gunpowder. A chill air moved across the scrub and was gone, as though a vast being had blown a cold breath and then passed by. Jody shivered and was grateful for the hot air that fell in behind it. A wild grape-vine trailed across the thin-rutted road. Penny leaned to pull it aside.

He said, "When there's trouble waitin' for you, you jest as good go to meet it."

Norse Royalty Grip 800 Hands In 40 Minutes

Crown Prince Olav Tells of Sympathy With Democracies

Their Royal Highnesses, Crown Prince Olav and Princess Martha of Norway, yesterday did a job of handshaking that would have exhausted Jim Farley.

"It was almost too much to hope for," said President Peter O. Moe of the Norwegian Society, in announcing to 800 members in the Shoreham Hotel that the royal visitors "want to greet each of you personally."

They did just that, the 35-year-old prince nodding gravely and Martha flashing a gracious smile as the society went into a snake dance formation that wound itself across the ballroom floor and past the royal platform for 40 minutes.

Earlier yesterday the athletic young heir to the Norwegian throne gave cautious expression to his country's sympathy for the European democracies in their opposition to the Rome-Berlin axis.

Norway Officially Neutral

"Officially Norway is neutral," Olav told a press conference at the Norwegian Legation, where he and Princess Martha are guests until tomorrow afternoon. "We want to do everything to keep out of any difficulties that may arise in Europe. But being a democratic country, we are more in sympathy with the democracies than with the dictatorships."

"This indication I give of our popular sympathies must be taken as my personal opinion," he added.

The crown prince smiled when asked whether President Roosevelt would be able to repay his visit with a trip to Norway "during the next four years." The President "hasn't told me whether he will be too busy," Olav said.

Interested in Whaling Exhibit

From his press conference the prince left for an informal sightseeing tour, accompanied by Lieut. Col. Harold M. Rayner, U. S. A., detailed as military aide for the royal visit to the Capital. This is not Col. Rayner's first encounter with the prince, who won the 8-meter yacht race at the Olympic games in Amsterdam 11 years ago, with the American officer as one of the spectators. Col. Rayner was a member of the American fencing team, but explains that he "didn't win any medals."

At the Lincoln Memorial and in driving along Constitution avenue, according to the Army aide, Olav expressed great interest in the impressive execution of Maj. L'Enfant's plan for the Capital City. He was so fascinated by the whaling exhibits in the Smithsonian Institution he had no time to see The Spirit of St. Louis.

The crown prince specially requested that the Corcoran Gallery be included on the itinerary. Owner of a 160-acre farm near Oslo, Olav paused longest before the paintings of rural life and landscape. Rock Creek Park delighted him.

"A Wonderful Trip"

At the Norwegian Society reception the prince thanked his hosts "for taking the trouble to come here." He spoke easily, with a trace of Oxford accent.

"It has been a wonderful trip, from coast to coast," he said, "and we value this opportunity to learn the lay of the land."

Referring with feeling to "the many touching demonstrations by men and women of Norwegian blood," Olav declared, "We are proud of their contributions to American life, and we are glad you cherish your memories of Norway." He concluded his remarks in Norwegian, promising to take back to his people "your warmest greetings."

The royal visitors were luncheon guests of Secretary and Mrs. Hull and were entertained for dinner at the Norwegian Legation.

Today they will visit the Supreme Court, Library of Congress and Capitol. Senator Henrik Shipstead (Farmer-Labor), of Minnesota, will be host at a luncheon for the crown prince, while the Women's National Press Club entertains Princess Martha. The couple will call at the White House at 4 p. m.

Rail Agent Paid Tribute at Dinner Closing 44 Years

Nathan Weill, retiring district passenger representative of the Pennsylvania Railroad, was praised last night by Representative Van Zandt (Republican), of Pennsylvania, "for 44 years of service to the public and the country."

Speaking at a testimonial dinner, attended by 75 persons, Van Zandt extended the "best wishes in your retirement of many members of Congress to whom you have been a world of assistance."

Other speakers at the function at the New Colonial Hotel were William S. Shelby, secretary of Washington Lodge, No. 15, Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks; S. G. Daoud, representing Masonic organizations; H. M. Fletcher, assistant general passenger agent of the Northern Pacific Railroad; Gordon Pennington, general passenger agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad, and John G. Nettleton, general agent of the Pennsylvania Railroad. Frank Masi, of the Atlantic Coast Line, was toastmaster.

Czech's Last President Is 'Positive' Nazidom Will Crack Under the Weight Of Its Repression; Real Crisis Here, He Says

By Edward T. Folliard

Dr. Eduard Benes, Czecho-Slovakia's last president, said in a press conference here yesterday that there was one thing about the European situation of which he was "positive," and that was that the Nazi regime in Germany would fall.

He refused to prophesy when it would fall, or how—whether through "war, revolution, or evolution."

"But from what I know of history," he said, "no country will remain permanently enslaved."

The situation within Germany, he said, is acute, with the country divided between those who are fattening on the state—the soldiers, S. A. and S. S. troopers, spies and officeholders—and those who enjoy no such paternal benefits but yet must endure tyranny.

"No peace is possible in Europe unless the Nazi power is overthrown," Dr. Benes said.

"I consider the European situation now as a profound crisis. It is not a crisis that has come in the last six months. The real crisis began in 1931 when Japan invaded China. It continued when Italy went into Ethiopia. After that came the axis agreement between Germany and Italy, Hitler's march into Austria, his attack on Czecho-Slovakia and Mussolini's seizure of Albania.

"Now the crisis deepens, with other countries in Europe endangered—Poland, Rumania, Hungary, Yugoslavia and possibly Greece."

In essence, Dr. Benes said, the question now to the forefront is the same one that plagued Europe before and during the World War—the question of Europe's small nations.

"Not only Czecho-Slovakia, but all small nations of Europe are in danger of being completely subjugated by the dictators," he continued. "There can't be any peace in the face of a situation like that. Lincoln said that a nation could not exist half free and half slave. And so it is abroad. Europe cannot be half free and half subjugated.

"The end of the Nazi reign will be terrible for the Germans. They are living in such a state of terrorism that when the end comes the people, I am afraid, will be completely demoralized."

Dr. Benes held his press conference in the handsomely-furnished reception room of the Czecho-Slovak Legation, a $115,000 mansion on Massachusetts avenue's embassy row, that Col. Vladimir Hurban, the Czecho-Slovak Minister, refused to surrender to Germany.

Buckner Denies Bondholders Paid Beauty Lobby Costs

By the Associated Press.

New York, June 28.—William P. Buckner, jr., denied from the witness stand today that the expenses he incurred when he took Noel Carter and Doris (Peewee) Donaldson, showgirls, to Washington, were paid out of funds of the Philippine Railway Bondholders Protective Committee.

Buckner was chairman of the committee, and is being tried on charges of mail fraud and conspiracy to manipulate the bonds. The Government alleges he and four co-defendants defrauded holders of an $8,500,000 issue of the railway bonds by wasting money raised by the committee to try to have the defaulted bonds redeemed.

Under cross-examination, Buckner insisted the expenses of the Donaldson-Carter trip to the Capital in the spring of 1937 were paid by William J. Gillespie, broker and one of those on trial.

Admits Paying Bill

A moment later, however, he admitted that a bill for $389 which included charges for drinks and food at the Carlton Hotel in Washington from August 4 to August 8, 1937, was paid with a committee check. On this visit Buckner and Gillespie were accompanied by Buckner's friends, Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Schurman.

He also admitted that the Carlton Hotel had obtained a judgment against him for another bill of more than $300, and explained that the bill had been left unpaid "because it was for personal expenses."

On trial with Buckner and Gillespie and Felipe Buencamino, member of the Philippine legislature; C. Wesley Turner, broker, and Capt. John Stuart Hyde, former British army officer and now a Hollywood film producer.

Defense Ranks Split

A cleavage in the defense ranks was shown late today.

Conferring frequently with the prosecution, David Leavenworth, counsel to Hyde, conducted a hostile examination of Buckner in an effort to show that regardless of Buckner's acts Hyde had no culpable part in them.

Buckner acknowledged that he had not told Hyde, at the time their acquaintance began in Hollywood, about various parties he had given in Washington and New York.

The mail fraud charges originally made against Hyde were dismissed last week, leaving him accused only of conspiracy in one count.

Buckner's cross-examination by Assistant U. S. District Attorney Maloney was concerned mainly with the Government's accusation that he had conspired to rig the market in Philippine bonds by misrepresenting the prospects for their redemption by the insular government.
